

The Black Cat

November 1906

The Will of Monsieur D'Aubigny Anna Miles Olcott

The Man Who Bet His Pockets Don Mark Lemon

The Forest's Own $100 Prize
Violet McVillie

The Wiles of Women Donald Douglass

The Plasticity of "Beeswax" Will Lisenbee

Her Answer $100 Prize
Clifford Howard

Price 5 Cents

No animal fat-pure vegetable oils

The

BABY'S BATH

may make its roseleaf skin continue its beauty through life if you use HAND
SAPOLIO

THAT CHILD

will escape chafing and all skin troubles, and will sleep well who is bathed daily with

Comfortable babies are good ones
HAND SAPOLIO
babies are prizewinners

HAND SAPOLIO

PURE

SAFE

SURE

CONTENT

LOWNEY'S

CHOCOLATE BON-BONS

*Pure
Delicious Healthful*

The Most Perfect of Confections

REGD. U.S.
PAT. OFF.

*The Finest of Chocolate
Finest of Cane Sugar
Coated with Fruits and Pure Extracts of Fruits & Flowers
"Vanilla Blue"*

*"Name
on Every Piece"*

*The Walter M. Lowney Co.
New York, N.Y.*

WRITERS

We sell Stories, Poems, Jokes, Illustrations, Designs, Photos, etc., on Commission

for people who depend on our knowledge and facilities for better prices and quick sales. We want to hear especially from people who have had work published. Our booklet "Cash Returns" explaining our system, sent for four cents postage. No replies to post cards.

THE BURELL SYNDICATE
750 Gramercy Bldg., N.Y. City

ARTISTS

Fame and Fortune in Fiction

NOTHING PAYS LIKE SUCCESS in WRITING

We sell stories and book MSS. on commission; we criticize and revise them, and tell you where to sell them. Story-Writing and Journalism taught by mail. Endorsed by leading newspapers, magazines, and book publishers. Send for our free booklet, "Writing for Profit"; tells how and gives the proof. Thornton West, Editor-in-Chief. Founded, 1895.

THE NATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, 68 The Baldwin, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

WRITE THE WORDS FOR A SONG

AND we will write the music and present to Big Music Publishers in New York, the World's Greatest Musical centre. Send us your poems for our honest opinion. One of them may prove a "hit" and MAKE YOU RICH. Egbert Van Alstyne, author of "Shade of Old Apple Tree," says: "Your plan is a boon to song writers." WRITE a postal now for our FREE BOOKLET and full information. Metropolitan Music Co., 910 St. James Bldg., New York

AUTHORS, ATTENTION!

Write a Song

VINCENNES MUSIC CO., 503 Lakeside Bldg., Chicago

Fortunes are made annually. We write music to your words. Arrange, secure publication, copyright, etc.

IF YOU ARE A WRITER

We can aid you to find a market for anything you write. MSS. SUCCESSFULLY PLACED, Criticized, Revised, Typewritten.

References: Edwin Markham, Margaret E. Sangster, and others. Established 1890. Send for leaflet E.

UNITED LITERARY PRESS 128 5th AVE. NEW YORK.

SOUVENIR POST CARDS.

10 Beautiful Colored Boston views, all different, and our club plan, 10c. You will receive cards from everywhere for exchange. IDEAL CO., Dept. 22, Dorchester, Mass.

This Book is FREE

SEND FOR IT TO-DAY

It describes in detail the most complete and comprehensive course of advertising taught by any advertising school in existence. The Chicago College of Advertising is a real college, with a real mission to perform. Our successful students are filling positions in every state of the Union. Do not enroll elsewhere until you read what we have to offer. If you want to realize the possibilities of this interesting and money-making profession, send for our book today.

WE HELP OUR GRADUATES GET POSITIONS

Advertising men earn from $25 a week and up. There is always a demand for good men. We are in constant touch with employers who want to add to this department, and our students get the first call. CHICAGO COLLEGE OF ADVERTISING
1 Royal Insurance Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

SONG POEMS WANTED, also Musical Compositions. We pay Royalty, Publish and Popularize. We Compose and Arrange melody FREE of charge. GEO. JABERG MUSIC CO. 160 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O.

SONG WRITERS Your Poems May Be Worth THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS. Send them to us for the music. Accept no offer before reading Music, Song and Money. It is free. HAYES MUSIC CO., 14 Star Bldg., Chicago.

SONG-POEMS ON ROYALTY, and music published introduced and popularized. Music written or perfected. Send MSS. Copyright secured. Popular Music Pub. Co., (Incl.) 926 Enterprise Bldg., Chicago

SONGS PUBLISHED ON ROYALTY By New York's BIG MUSIC FIRM. No charge for writing music. NORTH AMERICAN MUSIC CO., Dept. C-50 W. 80th Street, New York.

HOW IS YOUR ENGLISH? A new correspondence method. Correct use taught from the start. Send for booklet E. Chicago Correspondence Institute, 1430 First National Bank Building, Chicago.

SONG-POEMS and musical manuscript arranged. Publication secured. Cash or royalty if available. Walworth Music Co., 78-102 Evergreen Ave. Chicago

SEND YOUR SONG POEMS TO ME

I will write the music and present to Big N.Y. Publishers. I made a fortune writing songs; my experience will aid you. My songs "Blue Bell" and "Way Down in My Heart" achieved world-wide fame. Write to-day for Free Booklet EDWARD MADDEN, 45 Madden Bldg., New York

MANUSCRIPTS of Books, Stories, Plays, etc., sold on commission. Books, articles, prospectuses, etc., produced by staff of expert writers. Manuscripts revised to meet publishers' demands. THE MANUSCRIPT COMPANY, 1122 Broadway, New York

PARISIAN ART Reproductions of famous paintings from Paris Salons. A choice collection of studies of the human form by the most noted French Artists. Album of 22 pictures engraved on antique enameled paper, size 10x15. Subjects: Repose, At the River's Edge, The Dream, and 20 others, together with an enchanting Art Photo mounted on ebony finish board, size 12x17; all for $20c, prepaid, including illustrated pamphlet. ONTARIO ART CO., 235 Ontario Street, Chicago.

SHORTHAND IN 30 DAYS

We absolutely guarantee to teach shorthand complete in only thirty days. You can learn in spare time in your own home, no matter where you live. No need to spend months as with old systems. Boyd's Syllabic System is easy to learn—easy to write—easy to read. Simple. Practical. Speedy. Sure. No ruled lines—no positions—no shading as in other systems. No long list of word signs to confuse. Only nine characters to learn and you have the entire English language at your absolute command.

The best system for stenographers, private secretaries, newspaper reporters and railroad men. Lawyers, ministers, teachers, physicians, literary folk and business men and women may now learn shorthand for their own use. Does not take continual daily practice as with other systems. Our graduates hold high-grade positions everywhere. Send today for booklet, testimonials, etc.

CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS
835 Chicago Opera House Block, Chicago, Ill.

Authors' Agency

Send stamp for Booklet C to

M. A. Dresser, Garrison Hall, BOSTON, MASS.
Mention This Booklet C.

Fifteenth Year. Candid, suggestive Criticism, literary and technical Revision, practical Advice. Dispassionate Instruction. Specialties: Fiction, Plays, Verse, and MSS. for Prize Contests. REFERENCES: Wm. D. Howells, Mrs. Burton Harrison, Thos. Nelson Page, Mary Wilkins Freeman, and others.

Good Piano Tuners Earn $5 to $15 per day

We can teach you quickly BY MAIL. The new scientific Tune-a-Phone method endorsed by highest authorities. Knowledge of music not necessary.

Write for free booklet.
LES BRISTOL SCHOOL, 99 Music Hall, Battle Creek, Mich.

I TEACH SIGN PAINTING

Show Card Writing or Lettering by mail and guarantee success. Only field not overcrowded. My instruction is unequalled because practical, personal and thorough. Easy terms. Write for large catalogue.

Chas. J. Strong, Pres.
DETROIT SCHOOL OF LETTERING
Dept. 34, Detroit, Mich.

"Oldest and Largest School of its Kind"

IF WE TEACH YOU TO DRAW

You can earn $20 to $50 per week, and upwards. All branches of drawing successfully taught by correspondence. PRACTICAL and PERSONAL instruction. Successful students everywhere. Write for "Sample Pages from Instruction Papers." SCHOOL OF APPLIED ART 6-12 Fine Arts Bldg., BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

BOOKS PUBLISHED

In a house of National Reputation. For 10c (silver) will mail "Instructions and Advice to Authors"; information that will save worry and money. BYWORTH PUB. HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

SONG WRITERS

Send us your poems. We compose the music. Simple songs often make great hits. Estab. 35 years.

GROOM MUSIC CO.
4 Steinway Hall, - Chicago

A Train Load of Books

The Dominion Company Failed

One of America's biggest publishing houses
I bought its entire stock of books at receiver's sale and am closing it out at 10c to 50c on the dollar.

Sample Prices: Late copyright books, were $1.50. My price 38c. List includes Eben Holden, The Sea Wolf, The Spenders, The Leopard's Spots, The Christian, To Have and to Hold and dozens of others.

History of Nations, 74 vol. Regularly $148.00. My price $37.00.

Encyclopedia Britannica. Regularly $96. My price $7.75.

Dickens' Works, 15 vol. Regularly $15.00. My price $2.95.

Choice of Fine Cloth Bound Classics 9c.

Millions of Books—Thousands of Titles.

Chance of a lifetime to get almost any book or set of books you want for next to nothing while stock lasts.

Books Shipped on Approval

subject to examination in your own home before paying. Every book guaranteed satisfactory, or subject to return at my expense. Write for my big Free Bargain List of this stock before ordering. It costs nothing. Will save you money. Postal card will bring it.

DAVID B. CLARKSON, The Book Broker
1139 Como Bldg., Chicago.

WE PLACE YOUR STORIES FREE

We teach you by mail to write the kind of stories that editors want, and we charge you nothing for helping to place your work. Write for our practical plan.

PAGE-DAVIS SCHOOL
of Short-Story Writing

Dept. 1125, 90 Wabash Ave., Chicago

WRITE for Money

BE AN ACTOR or ACTRESS

Best paying profession in the world. Engagements secured when qualified. Free lessons for a limited time except small expense for postage, stationery, etc. Write for Free Booklet on elocution and dramatic art by correspondence. Address CHICAGO SCHOOL OF ELOCUTION, 617 Chicago Opera House Building, Chicago.

VENTRILOQUISM

Learned by any Man or Boy at home. Small cost. Send to-day 2-cent stamp for particulars and proof. O. A. SMITH, Room 94, 2010 Knoxville Ave., PEORIA, ILL.

Souvenir Post Cards

Views, Comics, Leather, Birthday, Holidays, specialties, etc. Best cards at the lowest prices. Big variety of fine albums. Send 10 cents for full value in handsome cards, and latest catalogue, listing over 5,000 best subjects. National Post Card Co., 270 Logan Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

99 NEW SONGS for 10c

Want all the Best Songs Native White Men around acalm While Jo Long Mary Waiting at the Church. Not because your Hair is Curly. Everybody Works but Father. Why don't You Try. Cheyenne, Grand Old Flag, Yankee Doodle. Buy. Can't You See I'm Lonely. What you gotta do when the Best Gospel Song, Healing Hands, Cross Your Heart. In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree, Blue Bell, Is She Old Enough, and 99 others just as good; also a list of 500 other songs. $1 One Bill and a 10c-Price Ticket. All the above sent post paid for ten cts. DRAPER MUSIC CO., Dept. 110, 809 Van Buren St., CHICAGO.

STUDY JOURNALISM

It pays quickest money of all professions. Learn to write news articles, dispatches, stories, etc., by doing actual reporting under staff editors of great Chicago newspapers. Course by Edwin L. Shamus, author of "Practical Journalism," the standard book on the subject. Every advantage of expert personal instruction by mail. Our students soon win positions. Terms reasonable. Catalogue free.

PRACTICAL SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM
635 Opera House Block, Chicago

"THE LITTLE RED SCHOOL HOUSE

On the Hill is the Real Symbol of the Strength and Perpetuity of American Institutions. The greatest Legacy a man can leave his children is a sound Education. A child's Endowment Policy in The Prudential creates a Trust Fund for the Maintenance and Education of Children. A heritage of millions is not so valuable to the individual as the legacy of schooling which puts into his hands the tools with which he may carve his own fortune, the weapons by which he may achieve his own destiny. The individual, the home, the nation, owe the founders of safe and reliable methods of Life Insurance a debt of gratitude which words cannot express, but which hearts can feel and homes can show."

Thus writes Dr. Nathan C. Schaeffer, President National Educators Association and Superintendent Public Instruction of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Do you want to give your children a Good Education? If so, write The Prudential to-day for a complete copy of Dr. Schaeffer's article, sent free. You will find it both entertaining and instructive, as well as explanatory of how you can at small cost, guarantee your boys and girls an excellent schooling. Write Dept. 93

The Prudential

Insurance Company of America

INCORPORATED AS A STOCK COMPANY BY THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY

JOHN F. DRYDEN, Pres.

Home Office: NEWARK, N. J.

The Black Cat

A Monthly Magazine of Original Short Stories.

Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

Vol. XII., No. 2.
Whole No., 194.

NOVEMBER, 1906.

5 cents a copy.
50 cents a year.

Entered at the Post-Office at Boston, Mass., as second-class matter.

THE BLACK CAT is devoted exclusively to original, unusual, fascinating stories—every number is complete in itself. It publishes no serials, translations, borrowings, or stealings. It pays nothing for the name or reputation of a writer, but the highest price on record for Stories that are Stories, and it pays not according to length, but according to strength. To receive attention, manuscripts must be sent unrolled, fully prepaid, and accompanied by addressed and stamped envelope for return. All MSS. are received and returned at their writers' risk. CAUTION.—The entire contents of THE BLACK CAT are protected by copyright, and publishers everywhere are cautioned against reproducing any of the stories, either wholly or in part.

The Will of Monsieur D'Aubigny.*

BY ANNA MILES OLCOTT.

IF the letter were not in my desk, where I could put my hand on it any day in the broad light, if the agony of scorching heat did not sweep over me each night as I fall into a dreamless sleep, I would believe what I am about to relate but the fiction of a distorted imagination, the fantastic weaving of a brain surging with the fever of overwork.

Only yesterday I read the letter over twice, although for years I have known it by heart. I wanted to feel the paper in my hand and see the black letters on the page, to get hold of something tangible, something that other people could see as well as I. But I do not ask you to take my word alone. Go to Paris today and a thousand people could give you the particulars of the last year of Monsieur D'Aubigny's life, could tell you of his erratic actions and sudden lapses into unconsciousness that baffled the physicians of two continents, and they would add under their breath that six months after his death, when Madame, his widow, would remove the body from Père Lachaise to Monsieur's ancestral burial place near the château, she found the casket empty, though the lock to the vault showed no signs of having been tampered with.

I am a plain man, a practical man of business, Byron Rumford,

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

Attorney-at-Law, practitioner in the honorable courts of San Francisco. Ten years ago, after weeks and months of unremitting toil, I had succeeded in building up what promised to be a lucrative practice, and the same day that Katharine Sears promised to marry me, I was appointed attorney for the San Diego & Oregon Railway. Then came the frightful wreck on the twenty-ninth of January, when the bridge over the San Joaquin went down with seven passenger coaches, and I was called upon to win my first great case for the railroad. Night and day I worked, snatching time only at odd moments to eat or sleep, and sometimes not seeing my betrothed for days. Success meant an established reputation—failure the postponement of my marriage for a year at least, with the probable loss of the attorneyship in addition, for the road was fighting for its very life.

The day the verdict was rendered I received the congratulations of the President and Directors as though in a dream. The only thing I distinctly remember is Tom Littleton's face when he grasped my hand until the knuckles cracked, and cried,

"Well done, old fellow! We're proud of you!"

Then I snatched up my hat, rushed out of the suffocating courtroom into Webster Street, down past the Post Office, and stopped only when I had entered my own rooms at 4 Pierpont Street, and slammed the door behind me.

I would change my clothes at once and be the first to tell Katharine Sears of my triumph, and tell her, too, that she could prepare for a wedding next month, for I wouldn't wait a day longer. I laughed aloud as I tossed my hat into a chair and stumbled into my dressing-room. My head whirled, the dull roar of a cataract was in my ears, the pictures on the wall danced hither and thither like shadows over restless water. I could see my hand tremble as I untied my cravat. Then I vaguely remembered that I had not eaten a mouthful or closed my eyes for twenty-four hours. I rang the bell and threw myself on the couch to wait for a cup of coffee, but fell asleep.

I was awakened by a sharp pain in my left side and involuntarily placed my hand upon the spot. At that instant I perceived I was in bed. It seemed perfectly natural that I should be there. A sense of comfort thrilled through all my limbs as I stretched them out between the linen sheets. A thin ray of sunlight slipped into the room between a parted velvet curtain and fell aslant a small painting opposite the foot of the bed. I closed my eyes and opened them again. Yes, it was one of Manet's, a narrow-eyed girl with a yellow putty face and a dress just like the one Mrs. Noah used to wear in the ark that Uncle Jack brought me on my third birthday. I hated Manet; I had no patience with the people who raved about him. How did such a thing get into my room?

My room! I sat up in bed and looked around. In one corner stood a Louis Quinze dressing table, delicately inlaid with mother-of-pearl and covered with silver toilet articles. I had never owned a piece of silver in my life, except my match box. On the floor was a dark blue carpet and before the two great windows that reached from the ceiling down hung dark blue velvet curtains caught back by blue and gold cord just enough to show the curtain of lace behind. But, as I looked from the Dresden china clock on the mantel back to Manet's picture on the wall, a strange sense of familiarity seemed to grow upon me. Manet's modeling was fine after all, wasn't it? I was glad I had bought the picture, although Madame did think I had paid an exorbitant price for it.

I lay back on the pillows again and pulled the bed clothes up to my neck with a sense of satisfaction. As I did so I caught sight of my hand. It was short and square and on the back were many fine, black hairs. Strange, and yet not strange. Byron Rumford's hand was long and as hairless as a woman's. I raised my fingers and mechanically stroked a short, silky beard, and yet I knew, in some far-off way, that Byron Rumford had never worn a beard. Who was I, anyway? I knew perfectly well that I was Monsieur Danté D'Aubigny, that I was in the front room on the second floor of 32 rue de Clichy, Paris, and that as certainly as I pulled the thin red silk cord hanging above my pillow, Madame would come smiling from the next room, where perhaps she had been waiting an hour, and that five minutes later Jacques would come up with my coffee and rolls. I knew that I had been ill, that I was better, and that the doctor had promised I could go out today. But, behind it all was the ego of Byron Rumford, and Byron Rumford was reading Monsieur D'Aubigny's brain as he would read the record of a phonograph.

It was not a pleasant thing to read—in fact, it was rather ugly. I knew Monsieur D'Aubigny's friends, I knew what he did yesterday and what he did the day before, I knew all about that shady little trick on the Bourse last winter when Monsieur pocketed a million francs and Madame's brother committed suicide. Monsieur rarely saw Madame without thinking of it. He thought of it now, as a shutter was opened in the next room. The thought was uncomfortable.

"Bah! the man was a fool, and deserved no better."

Monsieur's conscience was elastic. He was clever, other people were stupid, that was all. He dominated from sheer force of will. From a boy he had been able to make people do his bidding. He had boasted of it till that American, that Rumford, had laughed at him. "Mon Dieu! but Monsieur Rumford should pay for that laugh!"

I, Byron Rumford, read all this and more, in Monsieur D'Aubigny's brain. I cannot explain it; I can only state the facts. You may believe them or not as you please.

The pain in my left side came again. I raised Monsieur D'Aubigny's hand and pulled the red silk cord. Almost instantly a door on the right opened softly, and Monsieur D'Aubigny's wife, in a simple morning gown of white muslin and lace, entered the room. About the corners of her mouth deep care-lines had settled and her dark hair was prematurely gray, though in the delicate coloring of her cheek and the warmth of light in her candid blue eyes the caressing touch of youth still lingered. In her presence Monsieur experienced a singular sense of insignificance and rarely ventured to meet her gaze directly.

"You slept late this morning, Danté," she said, touching Monsieur's brow lightly with her lips.

"You were hoping, no doubt, that it would be forever," sneered Monsieur D'Aubigny's voice, in perfect French.

I was speaking, but I was saying just what Monsieur would have said, and I knew I was a brute.

Madame flushed, but made no reply as she walked to the window and pulled apart the curtains. Then Jacques came, as I knew he would come, with a silver tray and a dainty service of Sèvres.

I drank the coffee and ate the rolls with relish.

"How long have I slept?" asked I.

"Since early last evening," Madame replied, turning to leave the room.

"Bah! I must hurry. Send Jacques back at once."

I dressed in Monsieur D'Aubigny's clothes, and Monsieur D'Aubigny's eyes stared back at me when I looked into the mirror. They were masterful, beautiful, tiger-brown eyes. Byron Rumford had always admired and distrusted them.

Having finished dressing I went into the library, picked up a volume of de Musset's poems from the table, and sat down by the window to wait for the doctor. I felt quite well, better than I had felt for weeks.

The doctor, a near-sighted little man in gray tweed, looked at me curiously as he came in, felt my pulse, and inspected my tongue.

"If Monsieur will take care of himself," said he, "he will probably not have one of these heart attacks again for some time."

After he left I wrote a half dozen business letters, signed a check for Madame and received Monsieur's friends, who came to congratulate me upon my recovery. That afternoon I drove with Madame in the Bois. I remember how fresh and fine the air was, the March wind blowing the clouds away and bringing with it the first promise of spring.

It was six o'clock before we got back to 32 rue de Clichy, and I had hardly entered the house before a strange tingling drowsiness began to creep over me from head to foot. That was the beginning of those sudden periods of unconsciousness that puzzled the learned doctors of Paris, and finally resulted in Monsieur D'Aubigny's death. I remember getting to my room with Jacques' assistance, but I knew nothing more until a hand shook me roughly by the shoulder, and Tom Littleton's voice smote upon my deadened hearing.

"Wake up, old man, you've slept long enough. It's time you had something to eat."

"What time is it?" I yawned.

"Time? why it's eleven o'clock and you've slept since yesterday afternoon at three."

I sat bolt upright and stared at Tom without speaking. I was dressed just as when I had thrown myself on the couch, and my necktie had fallen on the floor beside me. I stooped mechanically and picked it up.

"Ugh," I said, "I've had a beastly dream. I'm glad you waked me up."

"Here, drink this coffee," and Tom pushed a cup of steaming brown liquid into my hand. "You won't think of dreams when you get that down. I came in to see about you yesterday afternoon, but found you sound asleep. Thought I wouldn't worry you, as I knew you were worn out, so I just covered you with a rug and left. Kitty wouldn't rest until I came around again this morning." He always called her "Kitty," much to my disgust. I suppose, being her cousin, he thought he had a right to. "She's worried to death about you. Wouldn't let me tell her a word about the case; said she was going to wait to hear it all from you. You're the hardest fellow to wake up I ever saw. I shook my wrist nearly out of joint," and Tom rubbed the injured member ruefully.

I got up, shook my legs and put the empty cup on the dressing table.

"Go into the sitting-room and wait," said I, "while I take a bath and spruce up. I won't keep you long."

Tom went out. It was good to hear him whistling in the next room. Thank fortune I was Byron Rumford, and that it was only a dream. But all the time I was dressing I couldn't help thinking of Monsieur D'Aubigny. I had met him five years ago in Paris, when I spent two years there studying international law to satisfy a hobby of my father, who expected his only son to make the family name famous. "I want you to do what I couldn't," he used to say, so I pegged away in Paris, though I must confess, at first without much heart in the work. Monsieur D'Aubigny came often to the lectures at the Sorbonne and, as our way home lay for some distance in the same direction, we struck up a chance acquaintance. I did not care much for him. He was too domineering, too conscious of his own powers. He never walked with me after I made him angry once at a café. It was in an unpretentious little place on the rue de Scine, a favorite haunt of English and American students, and four or five of us, with D'Aubigny in the midst, were seated in one corner about a bare marble table, drinking and smoking. D'Aubigny had been drinking more freely than the rest and was in one of his most boastful moods.

"You see, gentlemen," he cried, as he set his glass slowly on the table, knocked the ashes from his cigar by a dainty movement of the little finger, and threw himself back in his most imperious fashion, "it is all will. Will can do anything, if only you have the patience to develop it. I have the patience, then I have the will. I make you, I make anybody, do what I wish."

"You're a hypnotist, then," said I.

He glared at me as though he would strike me dead that minute.

"Monsieur does not understand," said he softly. He reminded me uncomfortably of a tiger about to spring. "I have nothing to do with hypnotism; that is mere child's play, mere humbug. But will, will, can raise the dead! Do you call that hypnotism? I make my will supreme. I bend others as I do my cane, so." He bent his cane until it snapped in two, and threw away the pieces.

"Well, call it what you please," said I laughing. "It's all the same to me, only I'd like to see the man who could make me do what I didn't want to. Perhaps Frenchmen bite easier than Americans."

He turned fairly purple and rose from his seat. I thought he was going to strike me, but he only bowed low and said in a voice that made me grow tense around the heart:

"Monsieur will understand some day. I bid you good evening, gentlemen." Then he took up his hat and left us.

"You've made a mortal enemy of him," drawled a young man.

"Well, I can't help it if I've made an immortal one of him. The wine had gone to my head and my face was flushed. 'I'm dead tired of all this talk. Perhaps now he will let us have a chance to see what our wills can do.'"

My father died soon after that, and I left Paris and returned to San Francisco with the result already related. I hadn't thought of Monsieur D'Aubigny for years and why I should dream of him now was incomprehensible.

With a sense of relief I dismissed him from my thoughts, gave the finishing touch to my toilet, and joined Tom Littleton.

The bright sunlight out of doors, the men and women hastening to and from business, each one a part of the material, work-a-day world, the busy afternoon in my office, all conspired to dispel any feeling of unreality I may have had. I dined and spent the evening with Katharine Sears, and Monsieur D'Aubigny, with his actions good or bad, was forgotten completely. I came home and went to bed with my mind full of plans for the future, but before turning out the light, set my alarm for eight o'clock.

A gentle breeze blowing across my face caused me to open my eyes. They fell involuntarily upon Manet's picture, hanging against its background of blue and white, and Monsieur D'Aubigny's hand reached up for the small silk cord.

Night after night the same thing occurred. As soon as I fell asleep in San Francisco, I began to live Monsieur D'Aubigny's life in Paris. At first I was interested, then alarmed, then horror-struck. Monsieur D'Aubigny was doing things before which Byron Rumford recoiled.

I dared not speak to Katharine or to Tom about it, for fear they would think I was losing my mind. I began to think myself that my brain had become unbalanced, and I wrote to a friend in Paris, making inquiries about Monsieur D'Aubigny. He told me what I knew already, that Monsieur's frequent fits of unconsciousness were confounding the doctors of Europe.

In the meantime, one night as I was going home, a thought so sudden and dreadful struck me that I reeled like a drunken man and clutched an iron railing for support. Was it possible that Monsieur D'Aubigny took possession of my body while I occupied his? I could not spend another night in uncertainty, and as soon as I had turned on the light in my sitting-room, I telephoned to Tom Littleton that I wanted to see him at once. The good fellow had gone to bed, but a half hour later he came in, gasping and almost out of breath with haste.

"Anything the matter?" he cried.

"I don't know," said I lamely, sitting half-undressed on the side of the bed and feeling like a fool. Then I added shamefacedly, "I want you to do something for me the next three or four nights and not ask any questions. I want you to spend the night in my room and watch me when I sleep."

Tom looked at me with his mouth wide open, then threw back his shock of blond hair and roared.

"Do you want me to rock you to sleep too?" said he.

"Well, of course, if you are not willing—" I began, red and white by turns.

"There, don't get miffed! I'll watch you for a week, if you want me to. But say, Rum, old fellow," he added gravely, "You ought to take a rest; you're working too hard."

"I'm only a little nervous," said I, "and have taken a foolish whim. You'll find cigars and books in the other room, and there is a kettle with plenty of stuff in the cupboard, if you want anything hot and bracing during the night. Tomorrow night I'll try to make you more comfortable."

Then, without another word I turned over, pulled the covering up over my head and went to—Paris.

"Did I say or do anything in my sleep?" I asked the next morning, rather fearfully.

"No, you slept like a dead man, you didn't turn over from the time your head touched the pillow until the alarm went off this morning."

"So Monsieur D'Aubigny confines his amusement to Paris," thought I, and went down to breakfast in gayer spirits than I had had for a month.

But things grew from bad to worse. I could not help what Monsieur DAubigny had done in past years, but could I not control the future of Monsieur's active brain? At first it seemed not. The personality of Monsieur D'Aubigny was directing my actions, and the ego, the soul, that God-given sense of being, whatever psychologists may call it, belonging to Byron Rumford, was too weak to resist. Monsieur's brain was the machinery, the ego of Byron Rumford, the motive power; and Monsieur D'Aubigny, God knows where, with indomitable intelligence, was directing all to his own diabolical ends. Then began a battle between the ego of Byron Rumford in Monsieur D'Aubigny's body and the ego of Monsieur D'Aubigny outside. If I were condemned for the rest of my life to spend a part of every twenty-four hours in another man's body, I would control that body, I would frame the actions and desires of that brain to my will, I would force new lines into that gray matter, which Monsieur D'Aubigny, with all his devil's power, could not eradicate.

In the beginning the odds were uneven. Monsieur had forged so well and so deeply that Byron Rumford again and again succumbed. I felt a subtle strain that, if allowed to increase, might draw me altogether from my own physical being.

My business in San Francisco demanded work for which I was beginning to feel unequal. I grew morose and silent and rarely saw any one besides my clients. My marriage was postponed indefinitely. I could not ask any woman to share this hell with me. It was better to fight alone until one or the other conquered.

Sometimes, in the open light of day, with the bustle of the streets, the jangle of the trolley in my ear, and jolly Tom Littleton at my side, I doubted the reality of my second life, and more than once came near putting myself in the hands of physicians at a sanatorium. It was in one of these moments of unbelief that I drew my chair to my office desk and addressed a letter to Monsieur D'Aubigny, 32 rue de Clichy, Paris. I begged Monsieur to give me a full account of his life for the past two months. I asked pardon for the seeming impertinence, but said that to me this was almost a matter of life or death, and that I felt sure Monsieur would not allow any little differences, that might have occurred between us in the past, to prevent his doing me this favor. I posted the letter myself, then went to see Katharine Sears, for the first time that week. She had gone to Chicago without bidding me good-bye.

I didn't blame her. I knew that she had shown infinite patience, that my conduct had been inexplicable, and that any woman with spirit would and should resent it.

In Paris one morning when Jacques came up with the silver tray, a letter with an American postmark lay caught under the edge of the saucer. I knew what was in the letter when I stretched out Monsieur D'Aubigny's hand for it and when I tore it open with Monsieur D'Aubigny's pudgy fingers. And that same day I wrote an answer in Monsieur's hand-writing and in Monsieur's perfect French. I put Monsieur's brain, Monsieur's body to my own use, and wrote Byron Rumford the full particulars of Monsieur's life for the past two months. I wrote that I, Byron Rumford, was at that moment in Monsieur D'Aubigny's body in Paris while my own lay like dead in San Francisco. But then an irresistible force assailed me. I could not tell whence it came, I only felt it in Monsieur's brain compelling me to write what I did not want to write, as before it had compelled me to do what I did not want to do.

"Mon Dieu, Monsieur Rumford shall pay for that laugh," echoed from one side of that brain to the other, and Monsieur's hand wrote the words at the close of the letter and signed his name.

I knew then, as I know now, that that sentence had been the last thought of Monsieur before he died, for that he died the night my torture began, I did not doubt. In my hour of weakness he had annihilated space and laid hold upon me with a grip of steel. Was I to be hounded, tossed about like a billiard ball, by a man whose spirit wasn't strong enough to animate his own dead body without my help? I threw off Monsieur's green silk dressing-gown and rang for Jacques; as I did so I glanced in the glass. Monsieur D'Aubigny's eyes laughed back at me in derision.

The night following the day that Monsieur's letter reached Byron Rumford in San Francisco, an event occurred in Paris that brought me to a sudden determination.

Monsieur D'Aubigny had concocted a little scheme for making a coup de maître at the Bourse, the success of which meant nothing less than utter ruin to a thousand homes in France, and I was to be the motive power, the dynamic force, set to work to execute his devilish purpose, to animate that dead body that ought to have been deep underground three months ago. Resistance seemed futile. My will yielded like water before Monsieur's. I felt myself driven, enveloped, overwhelmed. Still I fought on. If I failed now, what turn might not the ingenious malice of Monsieur take next?

Monsieur was in high spirits the morning of his great coup, and he waved his tall silk hat to Madame as he sprang into the carriage and ordered the cocher to drive to the Bourse.

Friend after friend greeted him as he entered the noisy halls, and he shook hands effusively with the very men whose death would quickly follow the ruin he contemplated. Stocks were running high this morning, men were excited, faces flushed, a dip in the London market had sent French consols up three points. Monsieur D'Aubigny steered his way through a sea of waving arms and struggling bodies, dropping a whisper here and a whisper there as he went. Then a gradual change took place, at first almost imperceptible. There was a tenseness in the air that made a man draw in his breath and stop to think. Some few began to sell, others followed, then suddenly it seemed as though the flood-gates of passion were unloosed, and the hall became a pandemonium of raging, howling maniacs.

"God! was I to be a party to this foul thing!"

A fury seized me, the passion of an outraged soul. I drove my will straight to the center of Monsieur D'Aubigny's brain, I forced my words through Monsieur D'Aubigny's set teeth, I wrenched myself from Monsieur D'Aubigny's body. A rushing swirl of blackness swallowed me.

I was cold; I shivered and opened my eyes. Through the open window the electric light made dimly visible my clothes upon the chair.

"Thank God, I was in my own room at 4 Pierpont Street, and it was night."

I got out of bed, pulled my suit case from the closet, and set to work to pack it for a journey. This thing could go on no longer. I would go to Paris, I would take my body there and fight it out with Monsieur D'Aubigny on his own ground. The conflict in the Bourse had given me courage, but it had also terrified me.

At seven o'clock I telegraphed for a berth on the Bourgogne, sailing from New York the following Wednesday, and, without waiting for a reply, took the first express East.

It is needless to tell in detail of that trip. I still occupied Monsieur's body when my own was resting, but since that day at the Stock Exchange it had been more subservient to my will. For the time being Monsieur's personality was held in check.

I reached Boulogne-sur-Mer, and hastened on to Paris by the next train.

At the point where the rue Duhpot cuts diagonally across the rue Richepense and opens into the Boulevard de Madeleine, almost opposite the church of that name, stands the Hotel Richepense, a small, comfortable house, with a proprietor too lethargic to mind anybody's business but his own. Here I engaged a room, thinking it the place where I should be least likely to meet any of my acquaintances and at the same time be within easy distance of 32 rue de Clichy.

Dinner was served at six, and at eight I was standing before Monsieur D'Aubigny's door. I sent my card up to Madame and was shown into a small reception room decorated with white and gold. How well I knew every portion of it, and of everything else in that house; I knew even on which side of his great brass bedstead Monsieur was lying at that moment.

Madame came in presently, pale, and with the same fine, care-worn lines about the mouth and eyes that I knew so well, but very gracious and with words of welcome on her lips. She was glad that I had come. Monsieur had told her about me, had said I might be expected any day.

"He is unconscious now," she added, "I cannot call it sleep, for it is too much like death. Recently his illness has taken a new turn, and his periods of unconsciousness occur in the day instead of at night. Today the time has been longer than usual."

"May I see him?" I asked tentatively.

"Yes," she replied slowly, as though thinking what were best to do. "He said you were to see him if you wished," and she rose to lead the way.

As I followed her up the broad oak stairs I could feel my heart thump against my coat.

Monsieur's door was ajar. Madame entered and turned up the light. It fell straight upon Monsieur's face, and I felt my own grow as pale as the dead man's upon the bed. He was lying on his back, one lifeless hand outside the covering across his breast. His black hair and beard intensified the whiteness of his pallid flesh. The edges of his even teeth protruded from his slightly drawn lips; and from his half-closed lids stared sightless eyes.

I gazed with a kind of fascination, forgetful of the woman at my side, forgetful of aught else save that ghastly thing upon the bed. This, then, was the thing that I must bring to life.

"They say," said Madame softly, "that sometime, in one of these strange seizures, he will die. It is the heart, you know."

"He shall die now, and forever," cried I to myself, but to Madame I made reply; "Had you not told me, I should have thought him dead already."

Madame shuddered and led me from the room. I pitied her, from the bottom of my heart I pitied her, and I cursed the evil thing that sinned against us both. When I bade her good night, I had made the resolve that Monsieur should not come to life again, that I would not sleep until Monsieur D'Aubigny was pronounced dead and was buried. Had I comprehended the full significance of that resolution, had I known beforehand the agony it would cause, I doubt if I should have had the courage to make the attempt.

For a week I did not close my eyes, for a week I fought sleep like a demon, and each day, like a murderer drawn to the scene of his crime, I retraced my steps to 32 rue de Clichy and gazed long and steadfastly upon Monsieur's dead features.

I hunted up every friend I had in Paris; I talked with them, drank with them, gambled with them, and when they would leave, begged them to stay, until they thought I was drunk or mad. Mad I was, mad for sleep! I would have sold my birthright to the meanest newsboy in the street, for one hour of sleep, but I would not yield. I dared not lie down to rest, for I knew that, as surely as I did so, Monsieur D'Aubigny would return to life.

It was August, and the weather, though not hot, was warm. I spent the nights on streets splendidly, gloriously alive with light and mirth. The city sparkled with a million brilliant lights; it was embodied joy, care free and reckless of the morrow. I hated it, and yet I loved it. It grated upon my worn nerves and weary brain—this splendid indifference to the woes of man—but at the same time it was my salvation.

I joined the laughing throngs upon the street, I watched them as I sipped my coffee before one café after another, I followed them to the music and dancing of the Champs Elysées. Once I went to the Opéra, but the deadly stupor in the air, ere it was half over, drove me out again into the street. Once, while I sat amidst the glow of a thousand fairy lamps, music, laughter and song on every side, my head fell forward on the table and Monsieur D'Aubigny's hand sought, surreptitiously as it were, for the small red cord. Then the band struck into a swinging march, and the waiter pulled me up by the shoulder. I stared at him a moment, then throwing down twice my reckoning, rushed out bareheaded under the cool, green trees. I raved, I swore, I beat my head with my fists, then threw myself face downward on the moist grass and prayed.

The fourth day came—and now I couldn't sleep. My eyes, burning in their sockets like hot coals, were sunken and blood-shot, my feet were swollen and my limbs ached like a tooth; streaks of white showed plainly in my hair. But my mind was clear and my determination unshaken. Would they never think Monsieur dead enough to bury?

People began to notice me, some with pity, others with contempt. An old gentleman passed me in the Café de la Paix, hesitated, turned, and came back.

"My son," said he in soft Provençal, laying upon my shoulder a firm white hand, "It is yet time. Better let the vile thing alone."

I looked up at him with wide-open, speechless eyes. With a look of infinite pity he turned away, and I let him go; but when it was too late I ran after him, searching vainly through the crowd to tell him I was not the wretched being he took me for.

On the afternoon of the fifth day I called, as was my wont, at the house in the rue de Clichy. Jacques opened the door. Madame asked to be excused, said he, Monsieur's funeral would be to-morrow at three.

I bounded down the steps, threw my hat into the air, and ran headlong around the corner into the arms of a gendarme. It took the best French I could muster and a twenty-franc piece to boot, before I could get away. This taught me to confine any undue hilarity to my own room.

The next afternoon at three, dressed in my best, I escorted Monsieur to Père Lachaise, where, in a black velvet casket covered with bead flowers, he was safely deposited in a florid marble vault to await the time when Madame could conveniently convey him to lie among the ashes of his ancestors. I saw the iron grating locked and bolted, I saw Madame place the key in her pocket and drive away.

"An extra two francs," cried I to a cocher, "to get me to the Hotel Richepense in half an hour!"

The maître d'Hotel, with a napkin over his arm, met me at the door. He regarded me curiously, but I didn't care. I was free!

"Will Monsieur dine at home this evening?"

"I don't want any dinner. I've eaten enough for the past six days to last me a month. I'm going to sleep, and I don't want to be disturbed for twenty-four hours — twenty-four hours, do you hear?" and I thrust a five-franc piece into his itching palm.

"Oui, oui Monsieur. If Monsieur wants anything he can ring. I will send up the garçon immediately, at once."

I ran up stairs, two steps at the time.

"Of course now that I want to sleep, I suppose I can't," I grumbled, as I tossed my clothes to right and left. But I had not been in bed ten minutes before the blue daisies on the wall paper faded out of sight and my exhausted body sank into a deep sleep.

"Bah! how cold and damp and dark it was. The weather must have changed." I raised my hand to pull the thin red cord, and came with a dull thud against hard, smooth wood.

Where was I? What did this awful blackness mean, this chill that sunk to the marrow of one's bones? Cold sweat stood out upon my brow, I struggled to burst asunder the barriers that bound, oppressed, stifled me on every side. Then Byron Rumford got the mastery, and Monsieur D'Aubigny's body lay quiet and Monsieur's brain obeyed the will of Monsieur's enemy.

So this was to be the end, I thought bitterly; and then, in the midst of my despair, a fierce joy surged through all my veins. Monsieur, in spite of his will, could not unlock those iron doors, could not even hurl his black prison house from its wide stone shelf. I was there, I must suffer, but, thank God, I could do no harm. I had imagined that if Monsieur's body were buried I should be free, but I had failed to measure the extent of Monsieur's vindictive will.

As I lay there, waiting passively for release, I thought of a story of Poe's that I had read years ago. It was about a man who, in delirium on shipboard, imagined himself buried alive. I remembered with what a thrill of horror I read the story, and that was fiction. How pale and shallow it was beside this monstrous reality. I knew, by some vast, intuitive knowledge that, as surely as the myriad stars shone in the blue-black sky above, as surely as the soft breezes of a summer night brushed the green branches of the swaying cypress against the arched marble of my tomb overhead, I was doomed to return each night to this loathsome sepulchre; that whether in the icy limits of the farthest pole, or in the depths of some primeval forest of the central zone, when the body of Byron Rumford lay down to rest, the spirit of Byron Rumford, in the misty border land between life and death, would obey Monsieur's hellish summons. For hours I lay in torture. Monsieur would have me suffer to the full. When finally the force of natural law brought me again to Hotel Riehepense, it was noon of the second day after Monsieur's funeral.

I plunged into a cold bath, then rang for breakfast. As I dressed, a plan began to shape itself in my mind, vaguely at first, then with sudden and startling definiteness. Why not get rid of Monsieur's body? Why not destroy it altogether and at once? But how, how in a place like Père Lachaise, guarded by night and day, could a man alone and unaided get that body? And after he got it what could he do with it?

I dressed and went out into the street. Involuntarily my steps turned toward the Seine. I crossed it mechanically by the Pont Neuf, and, turning to my left, walked rapidly away from the Isle de Cité. Suddenly I stopped. I had come to the region of the "Sanseulottes," the haunts of those latent passions that ever swell and heave beneath the watchful hand of law.

Within a stone's throw of the quay, and overshadowed by a tall tenement on the right, a shabby, gable-roofed wine shop seemed to strive to hide itself from view. Gold and blue letters above the door told the passer-by that the "Chien de Garde" was open at all hours day or night. Yes, that was the place. Two small deal tables, that once had been white, but were now spotted with blotches of stale wine, stood on either side the open door. I drew up a blue painted chair to one of them and called for a bottle of the vin du pays. A girl of sixteen, down at the heels, but delicately limbed, brought the wine. As she placed the bottle on the table, I made a slight motion with the middle finger of my left hand. She started, then quickly putting down the glass, re-entered the shop without a word. Presently a man in his shirt sleeves came out and sat down at the table on the other side of the door. He did not look at me, but I knew he was conscious of my presence. I coughed. He turned his head, then continued to sip his thin, red liquid from a broken glass and stared meditatively out upon the quay.

"A dangerous place for children to play," said I, nodding toward a group of bare-legged urchins romping near the edge of the water.

"They sometimes fall in," said he, without turning his head, and continued to sip his wine.

"And drown," said I.

"Petit Ami didn't drown."

"Ah, no, Petit Ami did not drown, but why?"

The man wiped the wine from his moustache with a greasy handkerchief, twisted his chair until it made deep grooves in the damp gravel, and faced me.

"Ah, Monsieur would know the story? Petit Ami was little, he was four years old, he was my only son. One day we hear a cry, the children shriek, my wife runs to the quay, she see one little red shoe on the black water and then nothing. I know not what to do, I wring my hands, I tear my hair, I try to jump into that black water, but men hold me back. I kick them, I bite them, but they will not let me go. Then I hold my breath, I keep quiet. I see a tall man toss his coat in the face of a gendarme, throw his arms above his head, and jump. Ah, Monsieur, it was magnificent, it was sublime! He come up out of the black water, that American, and he put Petit Ami's little cold body in his mother's arms, and then he turned to go away without a word. But I would not let him. Mon Dieu, I am not like a woman. He is a hero. I pull him into my shop. I kiss his hands, I kiss his feet. He blush, but he pity me. 'Ah, Monsieur,' I cry, 'You save my son, my only son. When you are in trouble come to me.' I am wise; and I give him a sign. When he comes, Mon Dieu, but I will keep my promise."

"I have come," said I.

He brushed the black, dank hair back from his sallow brow.

"Come with me," said he, and entered the dingy wineshop. It was empty.

He led me to a tiny room in the rear with one small, square window of ground glass, and shut and locked the door. He motioned me to the one chair, and balanced himself on the table.

"We are safe here," said he, "tell me. We ask no questions; it is our code."

"There is a dead man in Père Lachaise who was buried day before yesterday. I want that man's body. I want to destroy it, to destroy it utterly. I pray you to help me," said I, going straight to the point.

"It is a hard thing you ask me, Monsieur. I must think. But, if it can be done, we can do it. I will tell you a secret. You are honest, you fear not death, you hate the gendarmes. We are twenty thousand strong in Paris, Monsieur, Apachés they call us, and the police fear us more than they fear the law, though they know not one of us. It is a grand brotherhood, Monsieur. We are above the law, we despise it, we spurn it!" He leaned forward until his unshaven face almost touched my cheek. "We are everywhere, we know everything, and when we die, we die with closed lips. It is a mystery. You will see. When the clock strikes twelve tonight be at the gate of Père Lachaise and walk toward the right. It is better that at present you know nothing more. Now, go!" And without another word he sent me away, with a mixture of confidence and uncertainty in my breast.

That night at twelve, nervously glancing to right and left, I passed the gate of Père Lachaise. A shadow crept out from an angle of the wall, followed me, passed me, and went on ahead. With my heart beating like a sledge hammer at every step, I, in my turn, followed. The shadow skirted the wall to the left and I did the same. Soon a second shadow glided out from the darkness, joined the first and moved on. We left the lights of the boulevards and the teeming streets far behind. Then the wall turned abruptly and a great stone support jutting out at right-angles, cast a broad, deep shadow. The two figures stopped and I caught up with them. One was the father of Petit Ami, but he said not a word. A third man, with a bag over his shoulder, rose out of space and silently took his place beside us. The father of Petit Ami took off his shoes and with the end of a rope between his teeth scrambled up the wall like a cat. When he had gained the top, he fastened the rope to something I could not see and gave a low hiss. Immediately I felt myself grasped firmly and lifted upon the shoulders of a man, and instinctively I clutched the rope dangling by the side of the wall. A moment later I dropped on the other side. The man with the bag joined us.

It was very dark. A fine rain had fallen all the afternoon and had soaked the hedges and the long grass. Bending low among the tall shrubs, knocking showers of water from the dripping branches of the trees, wet to the skin, we felt our way from path to path, stopping now and then behind some weather-beaten tomb to listen. Only the drip of the rain and our own heavy breathing broke the deathly stillness. Silently, fearfully, we stood at last before Monsieur's sepulchre, that suddenly rose out of the darkness like a great ghost.

The father of Petit Ami unlocked the massive iron gate as though the key he used had been made for the purpose. We went in and pulled the door shut after us. The man with the bag thrust something into my hand. I knew by the feeling that it was a tiny lantern. I pulled the slide, and a dim flicker of light fell upon Monsieur's coffin. The man fished a screw-driver from the bag and set to work, while I held the lantern. Not a ray was visible from outside, I knew, for there was only sufficient light to see each screw by itself.

"Ah, but Monsieur's coffin was well screwed," thought I, and I trembled lest dawn should find us yet at work. But so dextrously, so swiftly was it done, that in ten minutes the top of Monsieur's velvet-covered casket was fastened as tightly as before and Monsieur's body was head-downward in the sack.

Crouching under the shelter of a dense hedge of box, we listened to the steady tread of the guard coming nearer and nearer. The footsteps stopped opposite our hiding place a moment, then passed on, but more slowly than before, it seemed to me. Cautiously we began to thread our way back, the man with the heavy sack over his shoulders keeping between.

I felt as though I were a partner in some black and fearful crime of the middle ages, and should not have been surprised to feel the sharp prick of a dagger between my shoulder blades. I was a criminal before the law, and these, my comrades, belonged to the great fraternity of crime.

We had almost reached the wall, and I began to breathe more freely. Once outside, the rest would be plain sailing. Suddenly every drop of blood in my body seemed to congeal, and it was with difficulty that I kept myself from shrieking aloud. A heavy hand had fallen on my shoulder and held me like a vise.

"Hist!" whispered the voice of Petit Ami's father, "We are followed!"

The man with the bag had disappeared.

I listened, but could hear nothing.

"They are on the right," whispered the voice again. "Put your hand on my shoulder and follow. It is better to try to make the wall."

I obeyed blindly. The wet branches cut my face, but I bowed my head and plunged on. The black outline of the huge wall loomed before us. Again I was lifted up. This time the rope was more difficult to find, as I could not see it. I got hold of it at last, however, and was on the point of swinging my leg over the wall when a voice shouted from below,

"Here they are! Fire!"

Then, as a shot rang out, I dropped suddenly fifteen feet to the ground without the wall, and a man on top of me.

No sooner had I touched the ground than I was seized, thrust into a closed carriage and blind-folded. My first impulse was to resist, but the voice I had learned to trust whispered:

"It is all right, Monsieur," and I knew that with Petit Ami's father I need have no fear. I put my hand out on the seat beside me, but drew it back instantly with a shudder. It had come in contact with the surface of a coarse canvas bag.

"Lean back as far in the corner as you can," said the wine merchant; then added with a chuckle, "That was one of the closest shaves I ever had in my life. In the darkness we must have got nearer to them than we thought."

It seemed to me that we drove miles and miles before the carriage stopped. A breeze against my cheek and the soft lap of water told me that I was near the river. With a man on either side I was guided down a flight of steep, uneven stone steps, then another and another. The air smelt damp and unwholesome and I felt a drop of water on my forehead. On and on we stumbled, then a door creaked as though on rusty hinges, and we crossed the threshold. Some one jerked the handkerchief from my eyes, and I staggered back from a fierce glare of light and heat. The fiery blast of a huge furnace illumined the low stone cell and dried the moisture that would otherwise have dripped from the mildewed walls.

"We are under the river," said Petit Ami's father.

I nodded.

"Bring the sack."

With my own hands I took out Monsieur D'Aubigny's body. I thrust it, clothes and all, into that surging, molten mass. The blue tongues licked it up hungrily, and with the wild exultation of a fiend I watched it burn to ashes.

It was over, and Petit Ami's father led me away, and there, in the back room behind the wine shop, I fell upon the floor; but as I sank into a dreamless sleep, the agony of scorching heat swept over me from head to foot.

And so, each night, recurs the reminder of Monsieur's vengeance, though of late growing less distinct, until with the passing years, it promises to vanish altogether, leaving me only a memory. But what matter to me this fleeting sensation of the nerves! Let it go or stay! I am free, free, free!

The next ship that sailed from Boulogne-sur-Mer bore me away from the shores of France forever, and two weeks thereafter I pleaded my cause anew with Katharine Sears.

I have told my wife everything, and although she cannot understand, any more than I can, she believes what I say, and what more can a man ask?

The Man Who Bet His Pockets.*

BY DON MARK LEMON.

HE had bet his pockets, and lost. There was nothing of value in them at the time. What trifles there were — a few coins, knife, handkerchief, memorandum book, and cigars — he had retained. The bet had been made over the height of a building. His friend had stated it to be ninety-eight feet four inches, while he had declared it only eighty.

"Bosh!" exclaimed his friend, "I know its exact height. It is ninety-eight feet four inches to the top of that cornice."

"I'll bet it's just eighty feet."

"Nonsense!"

"Will you bet?"

"Yes."

"How much?"

"I'll bet a hundred dollars against" — the friend considered a moment — "against your pockets."

"You mean what's in 'em?"

"No; just your pockets."

"What do you mean?"

"It is ridiculous for you to dispute my statement of the building's height, so I shall make the terms of the wager ridiculous. If I win, you can never again wear a pocket in any of your clothes; if I lose, you get the hundred dollars."

"Done!"

When measured the building proved to be exactly ninety-eight feet four inches in height. A story had been added some time before, and Henley had failed to notice that fact. He had estimated the height of the building as originally erected. His friend had placed a bid for building the additional story.

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

The following day Henley appeared on the streets in a suit of clothes without a pocket, and began life over.

His watch and chain were suspended from a button on his vest, while he carried his handkerchief, bill-fold and cigars in his hat. At the first corner he met a lady acquaintance, lifted his hat, and spilled its contents to the sidewalk. The lady stared and passed on, while Henley returned his belongings to his derby and swore. He bought a newspaper, and then glared at the change for a dollar bill, saying, "I've no place to carry the stuff."

He hurried away from the crowd that gathered to scuffle for the coins, took a cigar from his hat and chewed the unlighted weed viciously. He had no matchbox!

As the shadows lengthened his temper grew worse, and by nightfall he was in the dangerous mood of an outcast from society.

His bald head was chafed from the rubbings of the bill-fold, and bits of cigar-wrapping irritated the raw parts painfully.

The next day he sallied forth with nothing in his derby but his head, for which he had suddenly taken a deep dislike, and when he felt the need of a handkerchief to mop his sweltering forehead, he stepped into a store and bought a paper napkin. His money he carried in a bill-fold in his hand.

"I was a fool to bet my pockets!" he snarled. "But who'd have thought a man couldn't live without pockets. I might as well be a woman and carry a haudbag!"

The following day a crook attempted to pick Henley's pockets, while that gentleman was endeavoring to lose his miserable identity in a crowd at a fire. The thief failed wholly in his attempt, and when caught in the act by a police officer and hustled away to the station-house, with Henley cited along as a witness, he put up the novel defense that he could not be held for attempting to pick the pockets of a man who had no pockets.

This defense did not save the crook, but it instantly made Henley famous as the man without a pocket, and to the inconvenience of his pocketless state was added the annoyance of notoriety.

He could not go anywhere without being pointed out as a freak, and a comic opera was written and staged, and a two hundred page sensational novel placed on the market, on the strength of the newspaper notoriety given the subject.

His friend refused to release him from the bet, so he packed his trunk, and with the brass check in his hat sought to lose himself in the great southwest. But his pocketless state followed him as unmercifully as the noisy Australian jackass bird follows a fleeing convict, and everywhere made him an object of curious and vexatious interest.

With his revolver in his belt and a dozen Mexican dollars in his boots, he fled into southern Arizona. Here at first he kept his tobacco pouch in the band of his broad-brimmed sombrero, but whenever the boys were out of the weed they would playfully shoot a smoke from his hat, and as the bullets tickled his bald head, he kept his tobacco in his hat-band no longer but suspended it from a string around his neck.

Later, he was reported to have joined a tribe of reservationless Indians, but having no pocket in which to keep a pack of playing cards, or a bottle of bad whiskey, he was expelled from the tribe.

His state was now so low that even the newspaper men lost track of him, and for a long time nothing authentic was learned of the man who had foolishly bet his pockets.

But one day, not long since, Henley's friend, who had won the odd wager, happened to be passing through the Mexican capital, and there, at a tobacconist's, observed a petticoated purchaser of a cigar acting in a peculiar manner, as if anxious to avoid notice, even in a locality where many women smoke.

It was the handbag awkwardly carried that first attracted his attention, and a closer look convinced him that it was no other than the unfortunate pocketless victim of his bet, whom he now felt willing to release from his onerous obligations, and Henley is now again in the States, a happy man, wearing a new suit of male apparel, having a double supply of pockets in every garment.

The Forest's Own.*

BY VIOLET MELVILLE.

He came into this troublesome world with two brothers in adversity in the heart of a forest. At first his range of interest did not extend beyond the nest, but on the eleventh day of his existence he uncurled himself slowly, stretched, yawned, and awoke to the outer world. His little round eyes blinked weakly in the half-light, but between the blinks they peered curiously in all directions, taking note of his surroundings, and when he had completed his survey he waddled forth very deliberately over the edge of the nest into the wonderful forest world.

For many days his life was the life of an ordinary domestic kitten, with nothing to record but a kitten's winsome grace and mischievous instincts. But this period did not long endure.

One morning his mother discovered him sitting in a tangle of undergrowth, his eyes fixed steadily on a single blood-red blossom that was swinging back and forth in the breeze, just out of reach.

The change in those eyes was quite remarkable — now. Their neutral bluish-green had turned slowly to a clear amber, and far down in their subdued yellow blaze an orange fire came and went to the swinging of the flower. — It was the Tiger's nature gleaming out from the Cub's half-closed eyes.

Many were the journeys he took after that, and each one stretched further and further beyond the reach of the maternal paw, until at length he would be absent whole hours at a time. He wandered to and fro in the heart of the wild, and by the voice of the night, and in the semi-gloom of her stifling vegetation the Forest spoke to her child and taught him. He could feel the strange stirring of savage impulses in him that he did not understand, and would lie with his muzzle on his crossed paws, as he had seen his mother do, for hours, straining his ears to catch the message that the forest sounds held for him. And suddenly one day he understood, and the cruel nature dormant in him stirred—and awoke.

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved. The writer of this story received a cash prize of $100 in THE BLACK CAT story contest ending October 12, 1904.

A little, red-breasted bird hopping from twig to twig caught his eyes. It was the scarlet on its breast that first attracted him, for he remembered that it was also the color of the wild flower he had coveted, and, now as then, the orange fire began to smoulder in the depth of his yellow eyes, and ever as he looked, the lust of blood grew on him, and, obedient to the voice of his instinct, he composed himself to wait. It did not seem a very savage thing to do, but only those who have seen a cat watching for the hapless mouse it is going to destroy can understand the untiring, remorseless certainty of that patient waiting. Hour upon hour passed, and scarcely a muscle moved, and the unblinking eyes never wandered for a second's space from their prey. Wherever it fluttered they followed to bring it back by the power of their resistless magnetism. To bring it back, and to draw it down, branch by branch, to the death that crouched below. It came by inches, twittering a frightened protest as it hopped lower and lower, and the terrible eyes watched with the orange light concentrated to two tiny points of fire. Then, suddenly, the end was upon it!—and an accurate stroke of the uplifted paw silenced the last terrified “Chir-r-rup” in the little feathered throat.

Long afterwards, when he was a full-grown tiger, and far nobler prey had fallen before him, he recalled that first little victim with a thrill of pride, for he knew that he had killed it, not because he was hungry, but just for the pleasure of hearing that strangled cry, and of drawing his claws through the quivering flesh.

When the tiger was about four months old he became conscious of a new element astir in his forest home. There were some altogether peculiar features about this element, and the denizens of the forest had each and all some wonderful tales to tell of it. Birds sang of it in popular airs, and the squirrels chattered aloud in their dread, and the monkeys screamed across from tree to tree the latest disasters, and the wily zorro moved her house regularly once a week. It became unsafe for any to venture forth by day, and, for that matter, to remain at home. The chiefs and elders of many families, and the roaming younger sons, went out in health and strength, never to return, overtaken by the unknown power in some unguarded moment. It was said of this power that it came whistling out of leafy haunts and flew on its way with the speed of thought, and great and small went down before it, a few with wild struggles and cries, but most suddenly and silently, as leaves fall from a tree.

The cub pondered much upon this phenomenon, rejecting, with the arrogance of youth, his mother's theory about the great animal, Man. His mother had some wonderful tales to tell of this peculiar genus of the race of animals, but none of them in the cub's estimation seemed adequate to the occasion, so he watched and waited, and thought himself very clever.

Someone else was also watching and waiting, and so it came to pass that one day he heard the invisible destruction come whistling through the quivering reeds where he lay in hiding, and of a sudden he was rolling upon the earth, dabbled in his own blood. Much that ensued was misty and incomprehensible to the cub. After several minutes, when his struggles had partially ceased, a huge, two-legged creature parted the meshwork of undergrowth with a cautious hand, and on seeing him shouted out to another two-legged monster like himself to "come there right away." Together they bound his three legs — the fourth was broken — muzzled him, and bore him out into the open day, where everything was new and horribly strange to him. In the forest he was quoted for some days as the latest example of the terrible power of this invisible danger.

At first the cub raved round the tree where he was chained, and tore the splints from his broken foot, and the straw from the box where he slept. He clawed great furrows in the bark of the tree, and flew at everything within reach, because he was young, and the philosophy of resignation was a closed book to him. His captors let him rave, hurting his foot and galling his neck with the strong chain that held him. They were accustomed to see this madness in the wild creatures they trapped, and they knew that it would wear itself out when he became convinced that he hurt himself most of all, and this was just what happened. Then the cub sulked, leaving his food untouched, and lying hour upon hour motionless unless someone approached him, when the angry tail would lash the air, and the gleaming claws spring, as by magic, from the velvet paws.

But as the days slipped into weeks, bringing no change, or hope of change, the cub began to pine in earnest, and his captors became concerned at last, for there was always the danger that he might fret to death. When he thought himself unwatched he would rise and gaze towards the forest with longing eyes, or at sundown, when the short, still twilight was dying and the baboons barked in the border-lands, he would spring up, the yellow eyes ablaze, for one brief second forgetful till the pull of the chain on his neck recalled him and he sank back into the old, dull apathy.

"Poor devil!" said Marshall to his companion one evening, after witnessing the action from the tent door, "I wonder what wild dream of freedom, stealing through the forest soft-footed upon his prey, crossed that cub's brain just now?"

And the companion shrugged his shoulders, for who could tell?

Weeks passed, and the cub tried hard to die, but the young life was too strong within him, and he lived, sullenly tolerant of this constraint and always with the burning hope that some day he would elude them, perhaps even break that hated chain, and speed back—gliding low to the ground with long, soundless strides—into the beloved, trackless forest whence they had torn him.

A year passed, and still the tiger was a captive. He could hardly be called a cub now, for in a twelvemonth he had grown into a magnificent brute of exceptional beauty of size and sinew, which his captivity seemed in no wise to have blighted. He had also developed in wisdom, and had become—not contented, no!—one had but to look in the inscrutable shining eyes to realize that he was not born to subside into unambitious, ignominious contentment with his lot—but neither was he the rebellious cub who had bruised his neck with the white man's fetter, and almost eaten out his heart in vain desires after freedom. This was another creature, masking his real nature behind a lazy ease of movement, veiling the fierce fire in his eyes for days together, and estranging himself behind a barrier of indifference which was incomprehensible, and therefore to be distrusted.

"A fellow can't tell," said Marshall, "Hang it all! he seems tame enough, and yet he hasn't got the looks of a humble captive about him. Whatever I may think at other times, I can never meet those steady, soft eyes of his without a shiver, they're too steady and too soft, you see, though I shall admire them behind the bars in the Zoo, if we ever get them there."

The hunters had moved farther away from the forest, and, the tiger being so tame, it was deemed safe at times to let him run loose when the men were about. He would answer to a call, and so made himself very useful in the catching of small animals, where his duties were those of a trained leopard. As time passed he became quite an ally in the chase, and his proficiency lured the men into taking him out after big game. His sole rival on these occasions was Nero, the camp dog, and after each hunting performance the enmity waxed more deadly.

"The tug of war will come some fine day," prophesied Marshall to his comrade, "Though the Lord only knows what harm a poor old cuss like Nero can do to Tigre."

"Natural antipathy of race—inherited from whole generations," replied the other.

"Then how about us? The same theory should hold good."

"And are you fool enough to think it doesn't? Can you picture that beautiful devil being on square, honest terms with any man?"

Marshall shook his head. "Yet so far——" he ventured.

"Yes, but 'so far' isn't the end."

One evening they were sitting at the tent door, and the tiger was lying in his chain, apparently asleep, when Nero began to bark furiously and, looking up, the men saw a full-grown stag standing like a creature dazed some twenty yards away. Chased out of the forest by one enemy, it had fled here to meet another, for, almost before they had sighted it, a savage roar caused them both to spring to their feet in time to see the tiger bound past them without touching the ground, and set off in pursuit of the deer. The mighty muscles had broken the bitter bond at last, and he was free!

The men mounted and rode forestwards, still thinking of the tiger as the animal they had tamed and trained, and never doubting but that he would return as always, when he had killed his prey. Far off on the level land were discernible two black specks that were fast losing themselves in forest gloom.

"I guess that this is the finish," said Marshall, but they still rode on. When night fell they abandoned the search and returned to the camp without their captive, but by dawn next morning they were riding out with the hope of seeing him prowling near by. They scoured the pastures with no result, and then entered the forest for their regular hunt, looking hither and thither, where the vegetation permitted it, for the tiger, and seeing him not.

Returning home at sundown, after their long day, Marshall whistled for Nero, whom they had purposely left behind, but there was no answering bark.

"Strange!" commented the other, and they quickened their pace. When they neared the tent they ceased to wonder, for, ten feet away from the door, lay a shapeless, mangled mass of flesh and bones, and that was Nero.

One word shaped itself simultaneously on their lips — "Tigre." They crossed to the tent, side by side, and at the door halted, for as Marshall's hand stirred the flap there came from within a low, guttural snarl, new to both of them, yet not to be misunderstood.

"There's just one thing for it now," said Marshall as he drew his revolver. "I did not want to shoot him after fighting him so long, but I guess I've got to." He swept the tent flap aside, and at that instant the great body, which had been gathering itself together for a spring, shot past him in the narrow opening, lashing him with its tail. They listened for the soft thud when he fell to earth, and the muffled footfalls that followed, dying almost instantly away into the hot silence of the tropical night. Then Marshall let the tent flap fall, and laughed a little, jarring laugh, which his companion echoed.

So it was that the forest reclaimed her child, calling to him with a voice that never wearied through all his captivity. And sometimes in the long English twilights Marshall thinks of the animals they caught and tamed, and then of one who was never wholly subdued, and he pictures him in many ways, but the last dream of him is always as roaming the Costa Rican forest and hunting the baboons that bark when the sun goes down.

The Wiles of Women.*

BY DONALD DOUGLASS.

HOUSAIN and Fatima lived in distant Persia, at Teheran, the capital.

Housain had brought his bride from a somewhat distant village, where he had lived before he became a servant of the owner of the village and followed him to his city home.

The place which he was able to prepare for his bride was very simple, though not singular for people of their position in life. From the narrow street you passed through a gateway in a wall into a court about thirty feet square, paved with cobble stones. On one side of this court were two rooms. The floor of one — the living room — was partially covered with a carpet. The only article that looked like furniture was the large chest in which the bride's clothing had been packed when she had left her father's house for her husband's. In a niche, which resembled a doorway, was piled the bedding which, spread at night on the floor, made their bed, and smaller niches about the room contained the few utensils of house-keeping needed in their simple life — such as a tea-pot, tea glasses, a sugar-bowl, etc. The other room was the kitchen and contained nothing but the brick range and a few cooking utensils.

Poor Fatima, accustomed to the freedom and companionship of her native village, found herself very lonely in this great city, left alone all day by her husband and neglected by the neighbors. She could not read, she could not sew, and the duties of the house took but little of her time, so she fell into the habit of climbing the ladder to the house-top that she might watch the passers in the street.

One day she saw, sitting on his heels on the opposite side of the street, a man who was evidently enjoying the book he was reading, for he shook with laughter and occasionally broke into a hearty guffaw. Fatima's curiosity was excited and she called out:—

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

"What are you reading?" "Some stories." "Who wrote them?" "I did." "What are they about?" "The wiles of women." "Come in here and read them to me."

Had not Fatima been carried beyond all reason by her curiosity she would not have made a request so improper, so contrary to the laws of Islam and the customs of the country. And had not the reader been intoxicated by the sound of his own stories he would have realized that he was entering upon an adventure that might well cost him his honor and his life.

So lost to all proprieties and to the flight of time were they that they were surprised at last by a thundering rap at the street door. Fatima, recognizing that only her husband would knock so loudly, whispered: "What shall I do? My husband will kill me."

The stranger saw no way of escape, but the woman quickly said: "Get into that chest and I will let you out later. It is the only way to save both our lives."

No sooner said than done. Fatima locked the chest and went at once to open the street door. She found Housain fuming at the delay, for she had always before been anticipating his return and had been at the gate before he had finished knocking. He was naturally jealous and was sure there must be something wrong. Fatima, however, showed no embarrassment, for her plan was laid. With the quick wit of the Persian and the Oriental perception of the value of truth as an implement of deception she saw victory within her grasp. She told her husband the whole story.

"Now," she said, "the man is in that chest and here is the key." Housain was much wrought up, and was thirsting for blood so, of course, it did not enter his head that he had eaten a twin almond with his wife the previous evening. As he grasped the key, Fatima cried, "Burdam" — the Persian way of saying "Philopena."

Housain, enraged at being caught by what he now thought a clever lie, flung the key upon the floor and rushed from the house, while Fatima lost no time in getting the author and reader out of the chest and house, but found time to say, as she put him out the door: "Have you, in your book, anything better than this?"

The Plasticity of "Beeswax." *

BY WILL LISENBEE.

HE gullibility of Ruggles was an open book to all the denizens of Blue Gulch before he had been in the town a week. In the hands of those who habitually quenched their thirst at his expense he became so plastic that he was known as "Beeswax Ruggles," and finally, for brevity, it was cut simply to "Beeswax."

The mission of Beeswax in Blue Gulch was at first veiled in obscurity. Finally it came out that he was an artist. At this discovery a mild spasm pervaded the social structure of Blue Gulch, which resolved itself into the interrogation of "Why?" The question was propounded by Pizen Bill, who felt that his prestige as the most artistic manipulator of the double action six-shooter with either hand was seriously threatened by the advent of one who professed to be a master of one of the fine arts. Beeswax received the question with that calm impassivity befitting a man of his profession and temperament.

His reply was both engaging and conciliatory. His mission in Blue Gulch, he explained, was in no wise intended to disturb the natural order of things, but merely that he might study, for a brief season, the rugged outlines of frontier life which appealed so strongly to his love of realism and virility in art.

These fine words mystified rather than appealed the inquiring mind of Pizen Bill, yet a sense of pride withheld him from further questions. An artist himself in his own peculiar field, he felt that his dignity as such would be best maintained by pretending to have understood the technical phrases employed by a brother artist, and to accept them as good and sufficient reasons for his presence there.

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

"Oh, I don't take no offense at your comin' to Blue Gulch none," remarked Pizen Bill, as he drained the glass which Beeswax's hospitality had filled, "fer I reckon the town must grow, an' in growin' it is only a question of time when it must have churches, Sunday-schools, water works an' artists. An' if Blue Gulch is to have an artist," he went on, slapping Beeswax on the shoulder, "it is proper that she should have one that's a judge of good lickin'."

In the days that followed Beeswax spent a great deal of his time locked in his studio at the Occidental Hotel. No one was permitted to inspect his work, nor were any visitors allowed to visit his rooms. He was going to give an exhibition of his work, he announced, and he would then invite all lovers of art in Blue Gulch to be present.

"There are no better critics than the people—the common people," Beeswax said to Pizen Bill in confidence. "If there is a flaw anywhere, they are sure to discover it. That is why I am so anxious to give an exhibition of my works here, where they have been produced, before taking them back East."

So potent was the social influence of Pizen Bill that under his patronage the formerly despised Ruggles became in time so popular that contempt was replaced by respectful admiration, and the somewhat too familiar "Beeswax" was still further shortened to an affectionate "Beezy."

A number of all-day sketching trips were made by the industrious artist, on horseback, accompanied by a pack animal bearing his painting paraphernalia and canvases, and he might have had company on several occasions had he not very decidedly declined such companionship, on the plea that it would destroy his artistic inspiration.

Just as public expectation and interest in the promised art exhibition had reached an acute stage of impatience, the artist announced that only the finishing touches were now lacking, but that their application rendered necessary a trip to the outside world for the purchase of suitable pigments.

His departure was accordingly a cordial ovation that gave promise of a veritable triumph on his return. He was followed to the stage and for half a mile from camp by enthusiastic admirers who, while they did not throw bouquets, pressed upon the retiring Ruggles many substantial creature comforts to enliven his journey.

The stage had crossed a high ridge and was descending through a narrow defile flanked on either side by rocky walls when Beeswax, whose head was out of the window viewing the scenery, gave a terrific gasp. Almost instantly there came from the roadside the stern command to halt and throw hands up. It broke with terrifying distinctness on the ears of driver and passengers, and as they turned their eyes to the left, there, half hidden among the rocks and scant vegetation, stood a trio of road agents, their winchesters covering the stage.

"Tumble out, every one of you, an' fall into line!" came the harsh, imperative command, and the passengers, who knew by experience the folly of procrastination under such circumstances, literally fell over each other in their haste to obey.

As they fell into line the firm voice of the leading bandit again broke the silence.

"You little cuss thar call 'Beeswax,'" came the voice, "you that's bin a nosin' around lookin' fer 'lokle culler,' I reckon you've got a chanst to see the reel thing. Jist you take holt now an' go through the passengers fer us, an' if you leave a copper on any of their persons we'll feed yer to the coyotes as a solemn warnin' to yer like!"

With hands that obviously shook Beeswax proceeded to go through the passengers, and when he had finished had collected half a dozen watches, six pistols, and a pile of money that made him catch his breath.

Then the chief bandit, with still leveled gun, gave the order for the passengers to return to the stage, but Beeswax was told to remain, as they proposed to transact a little business with him, and the last the passengers saw of him he was grovelling in the trail, the picture of abject terror.

When, a few hours later, the sheriff and his posse arrived on the scene, the bandits and Beeswax had disappeared. A month later a letter, bearing an Eastern postmark, arrived at Blue Gulch. It was addressed to the mayor and the people in general, and was as follows:

Dear Friends:

I regret that I did not find it convenient to give my little art exhibition in just the way you were led to expect. However, my method of exhibiting specimens of my art was, you will doubtless admit, both novel and effective, and I may add, very remunerative as well. The three road agents who so successfully held up the stage at the Pass were carefully painted dummies, artistically prepared to represent the real thing—so perfect, it proved, that they only needed the voice, which I was fortunately able to supply by the introduction of a bit of ventriloquial art. The success of my experiment has been so gratifying that I am moved to reward the appreciation of your people by leaving them as a legacy the three dummies, which may be found hidden in a little cavern north of the Pass. You will agree, I am sure, that in these days a bit of artistic deception is necessary to success in all the walks of life.

Believe me, I am,

Most cordially and gratefully yours,

The letter bore no signature, but where it should have been there was a piece of beeswax fastened firmly to the paper.

"Well, I'll be derved!" exclaimed Pizen Bill. "Jist to think that an or'nary little cuss like Beeswax could come to Blue Gulch an' take the whole outfit in on a jim crow game like that! If ever he comes to the Gulch ag'in we'll give an exhibition of his remains hangin' to a tree, shot full o' holes, that will be a great deal more relistick than any of his dummies!"

Her Answer.*

BY CLIFFORD HOWARD.

AD the postman been a more observant person he would have seen that the letter he handed to the young woman at the door was both unexpected and disturbing. As it was, however, he passed on without noticing the sudden pallor that overspread her face nor the haste with which she stepped back into the house and closed the door.

Alone, and safe from observation, she stood for a moment in the narrow entry and gazed fixedly at the letter in her trembling hands. "I knew it; it is from Allen!" she whispered, giving excited expression to her thoughts as she noted the return address on the upper corner of the envelope; and as one walking in a dream she made her way slowly back to the little sitting-room and sank weakly into a chair.

Holding the letter on her lap she fingered it nervously and with growing agitation; thrumming upon it for a second, then picking it up and rumpling it between her fingers as she again read the superscription, or grasping it by one of the corners and drumming with its edge in rapid tattoo upon her knee. Twice she was on the point of tearing it open, but each time she refrained, as with sudden irresolution, and turned her face abruptly away, to stare for a minute out of the window with its dull picture of housetops and murky sky. Finally, however, with a quick, impulsive movement, she picked up the penholder that lay on the table at her side, and without further hesitation opened the envelope and drew forth the letter.

It was written in pale ink and the chirography was cramped and uneven, making it difficult to decipher. Her hands shook as she smoothed out the folds in the paper and held it up so that the light from the window might fall upon it. Then, in half murmur, half whisper, she read the letter aloud to herself, slowly and haltingly :

* Copyright 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved. The writer of this story received a cash prize of $100 in THE BLACK CAT story competition ending October 12, 1904.

HOTEL GRAFTON,
PORTLAND, ORE., Sept. 11, 1904.

MY DEAR MARY:—

You will be surprised to hear from me after all this time. I have not written to you since I left Buffalo. That was two years ago last March. I suppose you thought you would never hear from me again, and I thought so, too. I was desperate and hopeless and I thought it was all up with me. I drifted about out here until the spring of 1903, and then I made a strike for gold in Alaska. It was a last chance and a hard one, but I stuck to it and luck came my way and I cleared up more than a hundred thousand, and all I want now to complete my fortune and make life worth living is for you to forgive me, Mary, and take me back. I know I did wrong not to write to you or send you any word; but I was desperate and I wanted you to forget there was such a man as me. I thought my life was a failure and I did not dare to ask you to marry me and share my bad luck with me. But it is all over now and I love you the same as I always did, and I want you to say it is all right and you will come out to me here and make a home for me. You need never think about work any more. I will build you a house fit for a queen and you can have your horses and servants and all the money you want to buy books and fine dresses. Don't say No. I have made a man of myself for your sake, Mary, and I love you and I want you. Answer at once and tell me it is all right and say you will come.

It is going on three years since I have heard anything of you. Are you well and are you still hard at work with your typewriting? And how is the twin—Susan? Does she look as much like you as ever? I will never forget how you let me take her to the entertainment that night thinking all the time it was yourself. That was a great joke on me.

I wish I could come myself to fetch you, but I am in a business deal out here that won't let me get away for several weeks, and I can't wait that long for you. Don't think about the expense of the trip. I will look after that. Only say you will come and be my wife. I love you. I love you.

ALLEN.

She laid the letter down, and turning toward the window gazed out vacantly into space. A mist had begun to fall in the shadowing twilight, giving to the world without an aspect of utter dreariness. For several minutes the ticking of the clock on the corner shelf was the only sound that broke upon the somber stillness. The woman at the window sat motionless, save for the troubled heaving of her bosom. Her thin, worn hands lay on her lap, tightly clasped, while her upraised face, pale and tense, gave sign in mute distress of the torturing conflict that was burning within her heart.

A tear trickling down her cheek aroused her from her reverie. Mechanically she dried her eyes and then, turning slowly from the window, allowed her gaze to wander about the room in deliberate contemplation of its tokens of poverty and hardship. Everything about her, from her faded dress to the few, cheap pictures on the wall, spoke of toil and struggle and want. It was nothing new. She had been accustomed to it for years; but there was that in her expression now that revealed a suddenly aroused and bitter realization of her cheerless surroundings; a passionate revulsion of feeling; a revolt against the conditions that so long had bound her to a life of drudgery and care.

"But, no, no — it is not alone because of this! it is not because of this!" she cried in sudden outburst of self-confession. "It is because I love him, and always have loved him!"

There was a note of defiance in her voice, as of one who has reached a determination in the face of some opposing will, a victory of the heart over the forces of mind and of judgment.

Opening a drawer in the table she took from it a small bottle of ink and a sheet of note paper, and with the eagerness born of impellent resolution she made answer to the letter that lay before her. She wrote rapidly and without hesitation, speaking aloud each word as she wrote it:

BALTIMORE, MARYLAND,
September 18, 1904.

DEAR ALLEN: —

Yes, I will come. All is forgiven. I am alone now. Sister is no longer with me. I have suffered much since I saw you last. You must expect to find me altered in many ways. Answer soon and tell me how and when to come. I send you my heart's best love. It has been yours during all these dreary months of silence, and shall be yours till I die.

Always your loving

MARY.

She had scarcely signed it, when, with a little cry as of fright, she hastily drew her pen through the signature; and snatching up the letter tore it into bits. With the same impulsive haste she picked up the letter from Allen, put it back into its envelope and deftly resealed it. Then, across the face of it, in an unsteady hand, she wrote: "Return to writer. Mary Sedgwick died April 25, 1903."

Build What You Build, Well.

Build your body cell by cell, WELL. Use properly selected FOOD. That is the material, and, as the builder of a building selects the best brick and mortar, so you should select the very best material the world affords from which to build your body.

Nowadays we have that material right at hand chosen by an expert.

Grape-Nuts

food is made from the certain selected parts of Wheat and Barley which supply the Phosphate of Potash that assimilates with Albumen and makes the soft gray matter in the nerve cells and brain to perfectly rebuild and sustain the delicate nervous system upon which the whole structure depends, and the food is so prepared in manufacture that babe or athlete can digest it.

"There's a Reason" and a profound one for GRAPE-NUTS.

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., U. S. A.

THE WARMEST SHEATHING

Wind and Frost Proof

NOT a mere felt or paper, but a matted lining that keeps out the cold as a bird's feathers do. Six times as warm as the best papers, and warmer and cheaper than back-plaster. Costs less than 1c a foot. Keeps warm rooms warm and cool rooms cool. "It is cheaper to build warm houses than to heat cold ones."

Pat. Dec. 27, 1892, Dec. 26, 1893.

Send for a sample and catalogue (free) of Cabot's Sheathing Quilt.

SAMUEL CABOT, 3 Oliver Street, Boston, Mass.
Agents at all Central Points.

MAGIC LANTERNS

Illustrated Catalogue, explaining how to make money on a small investment, SENT FREE.

Stereopticons, Slides

And Moving Pictures. The Bright White Light for Magic Lanterns is the greatest money maker; costs at an hour. Latest Electric Cadium and Acetylene Stereopticons. Five hundred Lecture Sets with readings. 40,000 slides to rent. Special rental terms to those who buy Lanterns. Slides for Secret Societies.

WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE
DEPT. 12, 918 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

I Print My Own Cards
Circulars, books, newspaper. Card Press $5. Larger, $10. Money saver, maker. All easy. printed rules. Write factory for catalog, presses, type, paper, cards.

The Press Co. Meriden, Conn.

LADY SEWERS

wanted to make up shirts at home; $10 per 100; can make 2 an hour; work sent prepaid to reliable women. Send reply envelope for information to UNIVERSAL CO., DEPT. 100, PHILA., PA.

QUILTED MATTRESS PADS

MONEY spent wisely means comfort and pleasure to the spender. You go to bed to rest. Quilted Mattress Pads will make your bed comfortable as well as keep yours and baby's bed in a perfect sanitary condition.

The cost is small — and when washed they are as good as new.

Ask your Dry Goods Dealer

Excelsior Quilting Co.
15 Lighthouse Street, New York, N. Y.

Filmplate Premo

Takes plates or Premo Daylight Loading Films with equal facility. Permits use of the ground glass for focusing with either, and without the necessity of special attachments.

Three sizes: $3\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$, \$24.00; $3\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ and 4×5 , \$26.50.

Catalogue on Request

ROCHESTER OPTICAL CO.,
86 South St., Rochester, N. Y.

A National Daily Newspaper for Women

If there is an intelligent woman in America who has not longed for a great daily newspaper of her own, full of the things WOMEN want to know, clean, fearless, independent, ready to fight woman-kind's battles and handle without gloves the things busy money-seeking men are afraid of for "business" reasons, we have not found her yet.

This great publishing plant, built expressly for The Woman's National Daily, covers a city block and will print, fold, address and mail ONE MILLION EIGHT-PAGE PAPERS IN 200 MINUTES, sending them whirling to all parts of America by the fast night mails. It is owned by nearly thirty thousand small stockholders and has three and a half million dollars capital.

After a year of vast preparation, the building especially for it of the largest and finest publishing plant in America and the largest and fastest printing press in the world at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars, a great national daily newspaper to circulate from coast to coast by fast mail each day has become an accomplished fact. By special facilities this great daily paper, already having more subscribers than any newspaper in America, can be delivered in homes even on rural routes a thousand miles from St. Louis the day of date of issue. Published by a corporation with three and a half million dollars capital, but owned by the people, fearless, clean, independent and powerful, it will give the TRUTH of each day's world events. The only woman's daily newspaper in America, every member of the family is provided for in its columns. If you want to know more about what is really going on all over the world each day than the men do, the latest news from Paris, London, Berlin, Rome, the best daily short stories, the latest advance daily fashion notes from Europe, the daily "doings" at Washington, what men and women are doing each day throughout the world, with INSIDE information about them, all beautifully illustrated, if you are interested in some of the greatest battles for better things for woman-kind that have ever been fought, you want The Woman's National Daily.

Simply Send Us a Postal Card

The women of this country have never been united as a force in public life because the daily papers are published for men. The Woman's National Daily will make them a force that will be felt. We want you to see and read this great daily woman's newspaper, to know what it is doing for women, to be better posted, better read. You need not send us any money in advance. The subscription price is one dollar per year (313 issues, every day but Sundays). Simply send us a postal card as follows: "Enter my subscription to The Woman's National Daily for one year, and if at the end of three months, thirteen weeks, I do not want it longer I will send you 25c for the 78 issues I will have received, and you are to stop the paper." Sign your name and full address and we will send the great daily to you by fast mail each night, delivered to you every morning but Sunday. If after three months you do not want it longer, simply send the 25c and it will be stopped. We know that once you have read it, you will always wonder how you got along each day without it before.

IF THE MEN OF YOUR FAMILY CAN TAKE A DOZEN DAILY NEWSPAPERS, CAN YOU NOT HAVE ONE OF YOUR OWN? After looking over the "news" in your husband's daily paper, you will find the FACTS in THE WOMAN'S NATIONAL DAILY and can tell him some things.

The Woman's National Daily

Care of LEWIS PUBLISHING CO., Dept. 36, ST. LOUIS, MO.

A New Range Idea

We have produced a range that we believe meets modern demands better than any heretofore made. We call it the

PALACE Crawford

The old End Hearth — so often in the way — is omitted. There is more area in the top of the range — an end shelf at the left being added. The ashes fall into a hod far below the grate, which makes their removal easier and more cleanly and makes the grate last longer. The coal hod is alongside the ash hod — out of the way.

All the other famous Crawford improvements are present :

Single Damper (pat'd), one movement regulates fire and oven; Patented Dock-Ash Grate, saves labor and fuel; Perfected Oven, surest, quickest, easiest controlled; Reliable Oven Indicator, can't get out of order; Removable Nickel Rails, etc., etc.

Send for Illustrated Circular

Walker & Pratt Mfg. Co., 31-35 Union St., Boston, Mass.

Look Here Son !

Your father had it pretty hard in his day. There was no way for him to get the special training essential to promotion. With the INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS, it's easy for you! If you don't get a high position and a good salary it's your own fault.

To-day I. C. S. students are holding the most highly paid positions all over the country, as manufacturers, superintendents, overseers, foremen, and experts.

What the I. C. S. has done for them it will do for you. It will give you the right start, train you to advance in your present line, or help you to change to an occupation that suits your inclination.

Mark the coupon as directed and mail it to-day. The I. C. S. will advise you freely how to qualify for an advance. This advice will cost you nothing but a stamp, and put you under no obligation. If you are open to conviction, if you are ready to grasp the hand held out to you, do not be deterred by fear that you cannot succeed.

If You Really Want More Salary SAY SO QUICK!

STUDY This Coupon

International Correspondence Schools

Box 884, SCRANTON, PA.

Please explain, without further obligation on my part how I can qualify for a larger salary in the position before which I have marked X

Bookkeeper
Stenographer
Advertisement Writer
Show Card Writer
Window Trimmer
Commercial Law for Notaries Public
Illustrator
Civil Service
Chemist
Textile Mill Supt.
Electrician
Elec. Engineer

Mech'sl Draftsman
Telephone Engineer
Elec. Lighting Supt.
Mech. Engineer
Surveyor
Stationary Engineer
Civil Engineer
Build'g Contractor
Arch'tl Draftsman
Architect
Structural Engineer
Bridge Engineer
Mining Engineer

Name

Street and No.

City State

AINSLEE'S

for November

THE MAGAZINE

THAT ENTERTAINS

will have among its contributors a longer list than usual of well-known names. Authors who have won established reputations are comparatively few and hence the competition for their work is keen. Some of the names that will appear in the November number are:

Baroness Orczy, Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd, Kate Jordan, H. B. Marriott-Watson, Constance Smedley, Mary Moss, Margaret Sutton Briscoe, Caroline Duer.

But names are not all. The stories will be of the first quality. The novelette, "Beau Brocade," by Baroness Orczy, is a romance of great dramatic power and unusual literary excellence.

A short story, "Folly Farm," by Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd, will probably be considered next in importance. H. B. Marriott-Watson, in "The Prince's Pictures," tells an absorbing story of adventure in a style far removed from the stereotyped adventure story. "The Feet of Youth," by Kate Jordan, is as attractive as its title indicates. "Her Only Chance," by Caroline Duer and another, "H. Otway Presents," by Mary Moss, "The Stony Path," by Constance Smedley, "A Successor to Susan," by Sarah Guernsey Bradley, are among the other short stories. Margaret Sutton Briscoe and Lady Broom contribute the essays. An unusually interesting dramatic article by Channing Pollock, and fine poems by Curtis Hidden Page, Madeline Bridges, John Curtis Underwood and others complete a very exceptional number.

Price, 15 cents per copy; subscription, $1.80 per year.

The publishers of Ainslee's Magazine will give a $50 PRIZE FOR THE BEST MOTTO, to be printed at the bottom of the advertising pages of Ainslee's Magazine, tending to overcome the evils of substitution. For full particulars, address Ainslee's Magazine, 90 Seventh Avenue, New York City

Suburban Life

Be sure and add it this year
to your list of magazines

Many of you know it to be a most delightfully gotten-up magazine of 52 pages or more, 12 x 14 inches, printed on coated paper and beautifully illustrated with often as many as 100 fine half-tone engravings. Each number breathes forth the spirit of country living. It's the one essential magazine for the man or woman whose home is in the suburbs.

Price, $1.50 a year, and worth double the price.

Read Our SPECIAL OFFER

We have secured five hundred copies of that most popular and fascinating book, "The Garden of a Commuter's Wife," written by "The Gardener," who as you know is Mrs. Mabel Osgood Wright. The volume is bound in cloth, 354 pages, good clear type, and bears the imprint in cloth, 354 pages, good clear type, and bears the imprint of the Macmillan Co., and is an addition to any library. Until this edition is exhausted we will send to any address, postpaid, a copy of this delightful volume and a full year's subscription to Suburban Life, the two for $1.50. Just think of it!

Suburban Life, one year

The Garden of a Commuter's Wife

The two for

$1.50

A sample copy of Suburban Life sent to any address for 10 cents in stamps. Address all orders to

PUBLISHERS SUBURBAN LIFE, 16 STATE ST., BOSTON

A good Stylographic Pen at 75c. and up. Fountain Pens at $1.00 and up.

Agents Wanted. Write for catalogue and discounts.

J. B. Ullrich & Co., 27 Thames St., New York City, N. Y.

CROOKED LEGS If your legs are bowed or crooked the Alison Pneumatic Forms positively correct the appearance, making the trousers hang straight and trim. Light, easy, cannot be detected. Illustrated book and testimonials free, sealed. The Alison Company, Dept. 3C, Buffalo, N. Y.

FORMS ON

APPROVAL

"23 SKIDOO" BADGE, 2c

You know what Skidoo means. It's the latest joke out, and our badges are all the rage in New York. Get your own, be up-to-date, and join the "Skidoo League." One badge sent post paid with our big Catalogue of Novelty, Jewelry, etc., for only 5c in stamps. Address: R. DRAKE, Dept. 26, 100 Van Buren St., CHICAGO, ILL.

WANTED

We want to teach you the Real Estate, General Brokerage and Insurance business by mail and appoint you

SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE of the oldest and largest Co-operative Real Estate and Brokerage Co. in the world. Many are making 3,000 to 5,000 a Year Without any Investment of Capital.

Excellent opportunities open to YOU. Thorough Commercial LAW Course free to each Representative. Write for free 62 page book which gives full information how you can make yourself independent. Begin now.

THE CROSS CO.,

834 Resper Block, CHICAGO.

The Next Ten Years

When you consider what you could have done during the past ten years, do you not feel that you should at once commence investing at least $10 or $20 a month? The next ten years will seem shorter than the past ten years—a great deal shorter—and you will be surprised at the way evils of procrastination multiply if you do not act this very day. Let your money work for you. Our Booklet "B" will tell you how. MAILED FREE. WRITE TO-DAY.

Union Securities Co. of Nevada

27 William Street, New York

The Open Secret of Nazareth

By BRADLEY GILMAN. Printed in two colors. Illustrated from photographs of scenes in the Holy Land. 120 pages, 12mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.00 net. Postage, 10 cents additional.

Since Rénan's studies in Palestine, few so intimate sketches of the environment of Jesus and his mission have been presented as this. It is the product of a journey to the Holy Land, on the part of Dr. Gilman, and his studies are full of local color and enthusiasm. They are given in the form of personal letters to a friend at home, and are rich in impressions of Jaffa, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and especially Nazareth. Here he sojourns, studying the "Open Secret" of this birthplace of Christianity. The manner of living has remained almost unchanged since the time of Christ, and the author finds striking parallels between the simplicity of this out-door Syrian life and the religion which here had its origin. "And simple that religion must always remain, wherever taught or practised, else it vanishes." The teachings of Christ thus studied in the light of Eastern traditions and customs show new aspects which differentiate them from the tenets of all other religions. The study is full of suggestion, reverence, and sympathy. The book is enriched by numerous illustrations from scenes in the Holy Land.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & COMPANY, NEW YORK

Paris
 Mr. Léonard Succr,
 Bookseller and Art
 Publisher, PASSAGE
 DU DESIN, PARIS,
 FRANCE, is at the disposal of clients having any requirements
 to be attended to in the French Capital.
 Postage, 5 cents.

ODD ENTERTAINMENTS of all kinds for the home, club, lodge, sewing circle, etc., are in our 144 page illustrated catalog No. 6, yours for the asking.
 Send us a postal and it will be sent to you, postpaid.
FREE
 THE CREST TRADING CO., 776 Wilmart Bldg., N. Y.

100% PROFIT
 and more is being made in
NEVADA MINING STOCKS

Greatest excitement since 1849. Manhattan, Bullfrog, Goldfield and Tonopah districts are all booming. People who know this new mining country and existing conditions say the boom has only just begun. Now is your time to buy for large profits before prices go up on the jump and get too high. We know of one very promising stock that can be had at 25cts per share if bought at once. The allotment offered at this price is small and will no doubt be snapped up quickly, as the prospects seem good to make 100 per cent profit or more within 90 days. Other stocks from 5 cts. to 40 cts. per share. Send for free illustrated Nevada prospectus, maps and full information.

UNION SECURITY CO.,
408 Gaff Bldg., CHICAGO, ILL.

USE OUR MONEY

We helped 10,000 Agents last year. Goods ship't on 30 days' credit; deliver and collect before paying. Portraits 35c; frames 10c; sheet pictures 3c; stereoscopes 25c; views 1c; all art goods at lowest wholesale prices. Big catalog & sample outfit FREE CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO.
 290-5 WEST ADAMS STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

150 MAGIC TRICKS 10c

For 10 cents we will send you by return mail 150
 Magic Tricks with cards, ribbons, rings, etc., all so clearly explained and illustrated that with only a little practice you can easily perform them and be as great a magician as Houdini or Kellar. No other means of entertaining is so effective, yet it is easy to learn. We guarantee success. Big Catalog of many other tricks sent free with each order. Get these tricks and be popular with your friends. S. DRAKE, Dept. 332, 610 Jackson St., Chicago.

Refined ART Subjects

Elaborate reproductions of a superb selection of paintings by the world's most famous artists, pictures in subject and art welcome in any home. Titles: GOOD MORNING, GOOD NIGHT, THE YOUNG WOMAN, CAPRICE, and many others.
 These four leading works of art (in colors),
 10 x 15 inches, on exquisite antique enameled paper, mounted on "white satin" finished board, 50 cents prepaid while they last, including new art catalogue.

Ontario Art Co., 295 Ontario St., Chicago

Get Rich

If you have $10 Cash, and wish a $1000 Income, send to-day for our Free Instructions. Address at once,
MANHATTAN FINANCE CO.,
 Jersey City, New Jersey.

40 Complete Novels, Novelettes and Stories for Only 6 Cents

For the purpose of introducing our popular publications and securing new customers for them, we will send by mail post-paid to any address, upon receipt of only six cents in postage stamps, Forty Complete Novels, Novelettes and Stories by Popular Authors, as follows: A Terrible Espionage, by Charlotte M. Braeme; Wives on Fire's Love, by Charles Garriac; In Daydell Time, by Edie Adelaide Howlands; The Tide on the Mooring Bar, by Frances Hodgson Burnett; The House in the Wood, by Mrs. Jane G. Austin; Maggie Lee, by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes; The Sapphire Circle, by Anna Katharine Green; A True Story, by Mark Twain; The Parson at Jackson's Gulch, by A. Conan Doyle; Headleugh Hall, by Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth; Hulda, by Marion Harland; The Last of the Mountjoy, by Mrs. Mary Agnes Fleming; Samantha in Washington, by Joseph Allen's Wife; Five Ladies' Sacrifice, by Amanda M. Douglas; The St. Aldric Diamonds, by Emma Garrison Jones; Sold for Naught, by Mrs. Amelia E. Barr; The Mystery at Calthorpe Hall, by Charlotte M. Braeme; The Twelve Wine Glasses, by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes; My Host at C., by Anna Katharine Green; A Literary Nightmare, by Mark Twain; Alabama Joe, by A. Conan Doyle; Under the Laurals, by Mrs. Alex. McVeigh Miller; Monica, by "The Duchess"; The Mummy's Curse, by Louisa M. Alcott; The Bar Lighthouse, by Mary E. Wilkins; Throgmorton Hoppet's Discovery, by Julian Hawthorne; Codage, by John Habberton; Plotting for a Husband, by Helen Corwin Pierce; The Turning of the Worm, by Ella Higginson; The Criminal Witness, by Sylvanus Cobb, Jr.; A Terrible Retribution, by Emerson Bennett; The Drunkard's Wife, by Mary Kyle Dallas; The Heart of a Maid, by Etta W. Pierce; The Detective's Ghost, by Clarence M. Boutelle; John Berkeley's Reveries, by Borahio Alger, Jr.; Lost in the Woods, by Edward S. Ellis; Across the Plains, by Virginia F. Townsend; Dorothy's Dilemma, by Hayden Carruth; The Lottery Ticket, by Mrs. Jennie Davis Burton; The Fatal Ride, by Esther Serle Kenneth. Bear in mind that we send the entire collection of Forty Complete Novels, Novelettes and Stories by mail post-paid upon receipt of Six Cents. This is purely an introductory offer; we make no profit. Satisfaction is guaranteed or money will be refunded. Address: F. M. LUPTON, Publisher, No. 37 City Hall Place, New York.

MYSTERIOUS SKULL!

Great fun! Shines in the dark with a fearsome blue light! Funny ghostly price 15cts. post-paid. We will send our new illustrated catalog of Magic, Tricks, Illusions, etc., containing hundreds of tricks, accessories, etc., absolutely

FREE

WRITE FOR IT TO-DAY
THE CREST TRADING CO.
77E WITMARK BLDG. N. Y.

LADIES

BEST MFG. CO., Champion Bldg., CHICAGO

PUZZLES

Good Luck Horseshoe
Fashion Puzzle, 10c.
Three sets, 25c. (stamps), with Catalog of fifty best puzzles.

WESTERN PUZZLE COMPANY, ST. PAUL, MINN.

We'll pay $500 For Cents Like This

And Buy Prices for hundreds of other coins. Send 15 cents for Hub Coin Book, 150 pp., 2000 illustrations. Illustrated paper for a stamp. (Est. 1873)
Alexander & Co., 114 C Washington St., Boston, Mass.

MAKE MONEY EASY

Agents wanted in every county to sell the popular Novelty Kisses, with name, address, photo, lodge emblem, etc., on handle.
Send stamp for catalogue.

AGENTS EARN

$75 to $300
A MONTH.
(We show you how.)

My profits—quick sales—exclusive territory. Write quick for our liberal money making special offer to agents. Our new self-operating machines are the quickest sellers for lady agents.
NOVELTY CUTLERY CO., 68 BAR STREET, CANTON, O.

DAMONDS LOFTIS ON CREDIT SYSTEM

THE LOFTIS SYSTEM

Of Credit Means Convenience

This is the only way in which it differs from a cash transaction. There is no delay, no security, no publicity. It is simply a matter of confidence and convenience between honorable people. Do not think that you must give a cheap, ordinary present because you can only spare a few dollars just now. A small first payment and we will deliver to you the Diamond, Watch or piece of jewelry you select.

Our Handsome Xmas Catalogue

Is replete with thousands of beautiful jewelry suggestions for Xmas Gifts, Diamond Rings, Pins, Brooches and Earrings, Chateaux Watches, Silverware, etc., for Wife, Sweetheart, Sister or Mother. Sparkling Diamond Studs, Scarf Pins and Cuff Buttons, Watches, Match Safes, Bobs, etc., for Husband, Father or Brother. With its aid you can select in the privacy of your home suitable Gifts for all, both old and young. Write for Catalogue.

We will send the Diamond, the Watch or the article of jewelry you select on approval. If you like it pay one-fifth the price and keep it. Send the balance to us in eight equal monthly payments. We pay all express charges. We ask no security. All transactions confidential.

We give our signed guarantee of value with each Diamond. Terms easiest; quality of goods finest; prices lower than others ask for spot cash. We are the original, most reliable Diamonds on Credit in the United States. The Largest Jewelry House in the United States.

The Famous Loftis System received Highest Award, the Gold Medal, at World's Fair, St. Louis. Do your Xmas Shopping Now for our Special Xmas Catalogue. Conveniently and leisurely in the privacy of your home select the articles you desire. Goods shipped promptly; no delay.

LOFTIS BROS. & CO. ESTD 1858
Diamond Cutters
Watchmakers, Jewelers
Dept. 1529 State St.
Chicago, Ill., U.S.A.

$3.60

A $50 Watch for $3.60

Chain and Charm FREE.

GUARANTEED FOR 30 YEARS

This is a Genuine Gold-Filed Engraved Watch in appearance. Double hunter case, stem-wind & stem-set, and fitted with a high-grade ruby jeweled movement. Send no check, and we will send the WATCH, WATCHCHAIN AND CHARM C.O.D. $3.60 and express charges. Make careful examination then pay express $1.60 and express charges and it's yours. Write if you desire Ladies' or Gent's' also.

GUARANTEE WATCH CO., Dept. 258 Chicago.

Be Your Own Boss!

MANY MAKE $2,000.00 A YEAR. You have the same chance. Start a Mail Order Business at home. We tell you how. Money coming in daily. Very good profits. Everything furnished. Write at once for our "Starter" and FREE particulars.
B. C. KRUGER CO., 155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

CLASS PINS AND BADGES

For Society or Lodge—Collage or School
Made to order in any style or material. Read our money saving offer. Either of the two styles here illustrated, engraved in one or two colors and showing any letters or symbols. Get more than shown in illustration.

Silver Plate, $1.00 dozen. Sample, 10c.
Sterling Silver, $2.50 doz. Sample, 25c.
FREE our new and handsomely illustrated catalog—shows new styles in gold and silver. Satisfaction guaranteed. Celluloid Buttons and Ribbons at right prices. Special designs and estimates free.

BASTIAN BEER, 21 F South Ave., Rochester, N. Y.

Cook's Malto-Rice

A Pure, Ready-to-eat Rice, Malted

RICE contains more nutriment and supplies more energy to the human body than anything that grows out of the ground, and is the easiest food to digest.

MALT as a marvelously beneficial stimulant and tonic, man had known for centuries, but only yesterday did he learn to combine it to the greatest advantage with his food.

COOK'S MALTO-RICE IS A PERFECT BLENDING OF MALT AND RICE.

Thoroughly cooked, ready to serve from package to dish.

EVERY PACKAGE OF MALTO-RICE IS STERILIZED.

It's pure, free from "lumps," germs, and will keep.

Ask your grocer to-day for a package of

COOK'S MALTO-RICE

15 Cents

Plumbing & Heating Material Sold to Consumers at Manufacturers Price

Clean—Sanitary—Odorless Newest Designs Best Appliances Finest Nickel Trimmings

We sell you these modern Bath Room Outfits direct—you need not pay exorbitant profits to your plumber.

Prices for Outfits as Shown:

No. 1. $37.50

No. 2. $44.00

No. 3. $55.00

No. 5. $110.00

Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Connections easily made. Any ordinary mechanic can install with the aid of our comprehensive working plans and instructions. Ask for Book—Modern Methods of Sanitary Plumbing—containing charts, drawings and diagrams, showing how any ordinary mechanic can install plumbing fixtures without wiping joints. Also tells how to secure perfect sanitation. Price, 50c. We will send it free if you mention this Magazine.

Heating Plants for Buildings of Every Kind

We can save you from 30 to 50 per cent.

Send us sketch or diagram of your house for our estimate.

Steam and Hot Water plants of most modern construction.

We employ an efficient engineering department that will cheerfully furnish you ideas as to the correct method of heating your home or building. We guarantee satisfaction. Anyone used to handling tools can install our heating plants either in a new or old building by following our complete yet simple instructions.

MODERN HEATING APPARATUS CAN BE EASILY INSTALLED IN ANY BUILDING—WE WILL MAKE YOU PLANS AND FURNISH FULL INSTRUCTIONS.

Write for our Book "Cold Weather Comfort." Useful information and heating guide. It tells you every phase of the heating question—also gives full and necessary information on the care of your plant. Mailed free to anyone mentioning this Magazine. Price to others, 50c. Ask also for our general 500 page Catalogue, No. A. E. 605, on merchandise for the Home, the Field and the Workshop.

CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO.
35TH AND IRON STREETS. CHICAGO.

An Investment

is offered you in a well established business that in three years earned the magnificent total of

265%

This was done on a capital of $5,000.00, as was shown by the Public Accountant who examined our books, in his sworn statement before a Notary. Such tremendous profits and such a great increase in sales called for a larger capitalization. With this end in view

The Torchon Lace & Mercantile Company has increased its capital to $100,000.00

Of this amount

$80,000.00

Treasury Stock

Par value, $10.00 per share
is now offered for sale

The Torchon Lace & Mercantile Co. is the maker of the well known "Princess" Lace Machine, which is an absolute monopoly, as the company controls and manufactures the machine under exclusive patents. This gives an exclusive field, free from competition, and is practically limitless.

The lace making machine is sold direct to the consumer by mail and is as much a necessity to every woman as a sewing machine. It enables every woman to make and wear real lace.

25,000 machines have already been sold in the United States and foreign countries.

From this brief outline you can judge the tremendous possibilities of this monopoly which in three years has paid to its stockholders

Three times the capital invested

The increased capitalization and the business now in sight, will bring a corresponding increase in the earnings for next year.

Become a stockholder in a legitimate, carefully managed, established business. Place your money where you can get a good interest and know the principal is safe. Write to-day for full particulars. Mention this publication.

Torchon Lace & Mercantile Co., St. Louis

"The 20th Century Limited"

Fastest Long Distance Train in the World

960 Miles in 18 Hours

VIA THE

"America's Greatest Railroad"

This magnificent train is equipped with Pullman cars of the very latest design and has all the special features which have made the New York Central service so deservedly popular. Barber, Fresh and Salt Water Baths, Valet, Ladies' Maid, Manicure, Stock and Market Reports, Telephone, Stenographer, etc. A dozen other fast trains between

NEW YORK BOSTON

and

Buffalo Detroit Cleveland Columbus
Cincinnati Indianapolis Chicago
St. Louis

The West and Southwest

C. F. DALY, Passenger Traffic Manager, New York

SIX MONTHS FREE

THE INVESTMENT HERALD.—Leading illustrated financial and investment paper, containing latest and most important information on mining, oil and other money making industries, the most successful companies and the best dividend paying stocks. It shows how immense profits may be quickly and easily made on absolutely safe investments. Write for it.

A. L. WISNER & CO., Publishers,
Dept. 10. 78-80 Wall St., New York

SURE CURE! Brooks' Appliance

RUPTURE

New discovery. No obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushion. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lymphol. No lies. Durable, cheap. Pat. Sept. 10, '01.

SENT ON TRIAL.
CATALOGUE FREE.

BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., Box 1803 MARSHALL, MISS.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DURY'S OZARK HERBS restores gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT WILL NOT STAIN THE SCALP, is not sticky or dirty, contains no sugar of lead, nitrate silver, copperas, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers. PACKAGE MAKES ONE PINT. It will produce the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair, and bring back the color it originally was before it turned gray. Full size package sent by mail, postpaid, for 25 cents.

OZARK HERB CO., Block 18, St. Louis, Mo.

Learn Expert Accounting as a Profession

THERE is no reason why you should work for a small weekly salary when you might be earning five times as much as a Public Accountant or as Head Accountant or Auditor of a big business. If you are ambitious and willing to advance we can make an of you at your own home—in a short time—and at a mere trifle of cost. It will cost you only about a dime a day—the price of a good cigar. Clerks—book-keepers—cashiers—write us TODAY and let us tell you how we can add 200% to your salary. We furnish all text books and accept the easiest sort of easy payments. You earn while you learn and can double your income. Let us show you our plan. Don't wait till some one else gets what you ought to have. It costs nothing to investigate. Write to-day for our 200% plan.

Expert Accountant and Auditor

International Accountants' Society

63 Fort St. W., Detroit, Mich.

This BEAUTIFUL HAIR SWITCH FREE ON EASY CONDITIONS

Send only a lock of your hair and we will mail a 24-in. short stem fine human hair switch to match. If of extraordinary value, remit $1.50 in 10 days, or secure 3 orders for switches and get your own free. Extra shades a little more. Send sample for estimate. Enclose 8c postage. Mrs. Ayer's Hair Emporium, Dept. 402, 17 Quincy Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hale's Turkish Hair Elixir
Restores gray, thinned or faded hair or restores, quickly and permanently. Cleanses—does not stick, stick or grow, but adheres to its original color and youthful condition. Promotes the growth, prevents dandruff and loosens the hair. This by mail, p.p. for $1.—THE TREMONT MFG. CO., FRANKLIN SQ., BOSTON, MASS.

TRUSS FREE
U. S. Government granted patent for truss that no want introduced elsewhere at once. It's bound hand and while they work. No hot slaps or steel bands around body or between legs. Simple, safe, easy. Holds bad ruptures. No delay, back or spine pressure. Be smart. One offer mailed to all free. Send no money. SUREHOLD CO., Westbrook, Maine, 706 Main St.

CARDS SEND TODAY FREE TO INTRODUCE OUR SUPERIOR ENGRAVED CARDS
We will send two dozen styles absolutely free. We know you will order when you see them, and tell your friends about our stylish Visiting Cards. Just send your name and address, plainly written.

Card Case Free! To all who send 10 cards we will send free with order a handsome Morocco leather Card Case. Many dealers would charge 50c for the Case alone. 50 cards 50c. Sample dozen 50c. Say whether you prefer Script, Old English or Roman Lettering. Satisfaction guaranteed. ENGRAVED CARD CO., P. Box 462, DETROIT, MICH.

DIAMONDS

On Charge Account We Will Sell YOU At Cash Prices

Just drop us a postal stating size of stone and style of setting desired and we'll send you a beautiful, sparkling, pure white Diamond—a gem of the first water. No deposit required—we even pay the express. When the stone arrives, examine it carefully and compare it with other diamonds which COST MORE MONEY. If it isn't the finest, most brilliant diamond for the money you ever saw—send it back at our expense. If you like it, pay part of price down and balance monthly ON YOUR OWN TERMS. Don't hesitate—YOU can afford one of these gems, no matter what your income, for you PAY AS YOU PLEASE. Diamonds increase in value each year. They give an air of refinement and prosperity. As a present they are beyond compare. Christmas will soon be here—why not begin now and be prepared to bring to eyes of sweetheart, wife or daughter an answering sparkle of delight with one of these exquisite gems set in ring, brooch or locket.

Special offers in Diamonds, all pure white, perfectly cut, set in Tiffany, Tiffany Belcher, Flat or Round Belcher, Tooth or any fancy style of mounting desired, as follows: No. 25, $175; No. 26, $145; No. 27, $115; No. 28, $95; No. 29, $75; No. 30, $55; No. 31, $35; No. 32, $20.

Ask to-day for our FREE Catalog of Diamonds, Watches and Jewelry, and make your selection at once. Our liberal terms will surprise you.

The Walker-Edmund Co.

Importers and Manufacturers
T 69 State Street
CHICAGO

Catalog Free
LEARN to Mount Birds
by mail to men and animals. Fascinating work for Men, Women and Boys. Quickly learned in your own home. Satisfaction guaranteed or no tuition fee. Save your fine specimens. Decorate home and den. Highly profitable business or side line. Fine catalog and taxidermy magazine free. Write today, S. W. School of Taxidermy, 16 E. 1st, Omaha, Neb.

RUPTURE CURED
Full particulars free upon request. It will pay you to write to-day to The Review of Reviews Co., 13 Astor Place, Room 409, N. Y.

WANTED! AT ONCE!
A Personal Representative in your community to procure new and renewal subscriptions on the Best-Selling, Best-Paying Magazine-Clubbing and Book Propositions Ever Offered.
$25,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES!
Full particulars free upon request. It will pay you to write to-day to The Review of Reviews Co., 13 Astor Place, Room 409, N. Y.

Copyright, 1905, by The Shortstory Publishing Co.

Both press and public declare that nothing more clever than "The Kindergarten" was ever seen in cat pictures.

Here is a final chance to get a copy suitable for framing 8 x 10 1-2 inches. There isn't a home in which this artistic bit of cat cleverness doesn't fit in somewhere — whether it be the Den, the Nursery, the Cozy Corner, the Library, or the Summer Cottage. It is by Nelly Littlehale Umbstaetter, the artist of The Black Cat magazine, and forms one of 150 original designs which picturesquely present this famous feline in the role of the Minstrel, the Butterfly, the Football Hero, the Chef, etc., as also in connection with various sets of alphabets and tail pieces. The set cannot be broken and is only sold with a year's subscription to The Black Cat under the following special combination offer.

The Black Cat , one year, post paid	$0.50
The set of 150 drawings in specially designed covering, post paid	1.00
	$1.50

Special Price for Both, 75 cents

The Shortstory Publishing Co., 144 High Street, Boston, Mass.

How To Grow Tall

WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO ADD FROM TWO TO FOUR INCHES TO YOUR HEIGHT?

To be a "good height to dance with"? To be "tall enough to see in a crowd"? To improve the symmetry of your figure and add to your general appearance? It is entirely possible for you to increase your height and accomplish these other advantages in your own home without taking any internal treatment, without drugs, without operation, without pain or injury to yourself, without putting yourself to any inconvenience.

FREE TO ANY SHORT PERSON

In order that anyone can learn how to get increased height, we have prepared an interesting book for free distribution, explaining why some people are short and others tall, and telling how short people can add from two to five inches to their height, and get all the advantages that good height carries with it. All you have to do is to write for this book, stating your height, your weight, your age, your sex, and we will send you full particulars about the secrets of getting increased height and good figure. Address at once.

The CartBape Co., 42 P. Unity Bldg., Rochester, N. Y.

Magic Tricks

5 good tricks, complete apparatus, full directions, etc. Illustrated catalog of all kinds of

Magical Apparatus Free

RAILEY & TRIPP CO.,

Box 412 - Cambridgeport, Mass.

"DOLLARS IN DIRT"

FREE BOOK

Send for our new free book which tells all about the science of real estate investment. How to invest small sums in real estate. How to choose real estate judiciously. What class of properties grows in value most rapidly. How long to hold a property. When and where to buy. Cause of growth in population, etc. This book is not an advertisement of any particular investment but is the condensed expert testimony of the best known real estate men. This book will interest every one who has $5 or more a month to invest and wants to invest it where it will be safe yet where it will earn more than an ordinary 3 or 4 percent interest. Write us a postal saying, send "Dollars in Dirt." You will receive the book by return mail. W. M. OSTRANDER, Inc., 108 North American Bldg., Philadelphia Suite 122, 25 W. 4th St., New York City

A Happy Marriage

Depends largely on a knowledge of the whole truth about self and sex and their relation to life and health. This knowledge does not come intelligently of itself, nor correctly from ordinary everyday sources.

Sexology

(Illustrated)

by William H. Walling, A. M., M. D.,

Imparts in a clear, wholesome way, in one volume:

- Knowledge a Young Man Should Have.
- Knowledge a Young Husband Should Have.
- Knowledge a Father Should Have.
- Knowledge a Father Should Impart to His Son.
- Medical Knowledge a Husband Should Have.

Knowledge a Young Woman Should Have.

Knowledge a Young Wife Should Have.

Knowledge a Mother Should Have.

Knowledge a Mother Should Impart to Her Daughter.

Medical Knowledge a Wife Should Have.

Rich Cloth Binding, Full Gold Stamp, Illustrated, $2.00

Write for "Other People's Opinions" and Table of Contents.

Puritan Pub. Co., Dept. 133, Phila., Pa.

EVERYTHING

you require in the way of Tambos, Bones, Burnt Cork, Gags, Jokes, Wigs, etc., etc.,

FOR AMATEUR MINSTRELSY

in our catalog No. 2, Illustrated. You can have it for a postal. Write for it to-day, POSTPAID

THE CREST TRADING CO.

77 D Wilmers Bldg., New York

FREE

IT PAYS BIG To amuse the Public With

Motion Pictures

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY as our instruction Book and "Business Guide" tells all. We furnish Complete Outfits with Big Advertising Posters, etc. Numerous dramatics of fun, travel, history, religion, temperance work and songs illustrated. One man can do it. Astonishing Opportunity in any locality for a man with a little money to show in churches, school houses, lodges, halls, theatres, etc. Big profits each entertainment. Others do it, why not you? It's easy; write to us and we'll tell you how. Catalogue free.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO., 454 Chemical Bank Bldg., CHICAGO.

CHEW...

Beeman's

THE ORIGINAL

Pepsin

Gum

Cures Indigestion and Sea-sickness.

All Others are Imitations.

For

California Travel

Season of 1906-7.

☞ The Rock Island

will place in service magnificent new trains made up of Pullmans, Diners and combined Library-Buffer-Observation cars, electric lighted throughout and fitted with travel accessories and every comfort-contributing device.

☞ These trains will be run from Chicago and St. Louis to Los Angeles and San Francisco over the low-altitude route via El Paso.

☞ There will be nothing finer on rails than the Golden State Limited

☞ Make your plans now for a Winter trip to Summerland and secure early reservation of choice space.

☞ Our new booklet fully describing and illustrating this and other California trains, now in preparation, will be sent free on request as soon as published.

JOHN SEBASTIAN

Passenger Traffic Manager
CHICAGO

TICKET OFFICES:

BOSTON: 288 Washington St.
BUFFALO: 297 Main St.

NEW YORK: 401 Broadway
CHICAGO: 91 Adams St.

and other leading cities

Luscious
In Flavor

Wholesome
As Bread

Mackintosh's English TOFFEE

Is the only CANDY

with sustaining nourishment for the "Between-Meals-Hunger" felt by all who work or play.

So boxed in caramel form that it is handy to carry when shopping, calling, traveling or working. Put it in the school-bag for recess.

Avoid the dangers of ordinary candy — Mackintosh's English Toffee is good and safe to eat at all times. Try it NOW.

Any dealer can supply you (5c, 10c, or $1.60 tin) or will send out and get it. If not, write to Dept. 2

JOHN MACKINTOSH

78 Hudson Street

New York

THIS IS THE STYLE

of suits now worn by correct dressers everywhere. It is many years since fashion has produced such handsome and nobby garments for Men's wear. LOOK at the long straight front effect of coat, the shaped back with long vent. "They are beauties," will look well on old and young.

TO BE UP-TO-DATE order from us a full suit, coat, pants and vest made from the new dove Brown Worsted or a Black and White mixed cloth. We will make

ALL ONLY $10

It exactly like the above illustration, with an extra pair of striped worsted Trousers, and an extra fancy vest, to wear on occasion; practically two full suits for the price of one suit.

Besides, we send them to you in a neat, patent suitcase, without extra charge.

Let us send you a large illustration of the new suit, showing every detail in back and front. With it will send free newest samples for Suits, Trousers, Fancy Vests, etc. A postal card will bring them to your door. Address

THE FIFTH AVENUE TAILORS,
1101 Kesner Bldg., Fifth Ave. & Congress, CHICAGO
References Royal Trust Company Bank, Cap. $1,000,000.00.

MENNEN'S Borated Talcum TOILET POWDER

OUTDOOR CHILDREN

are healthy children. Send them into the open air, but don't neglect to protect their little hands and faces from the painful chapping and chafing which winter winds and outdoor sports inflict on tender skins. The best protection is the daily use of

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

Put up in non-refillable boxes, for your protection. If Mennen's face is on the cover, it's genuine, that's a guarantee of purity. Delightful after shaving. Sold everywhere, or by mail 25 cts. Sample free.

GERHARD MENNEN CO., Newark, N. J.
Try Mennen's Violet (Borated) Talcum Powder
(It has the scent of fresh cut Violets)

MONEY CANNOT BUY A BETTER INSTRUMENT

Than the Gabler Piano, because no better piano can be made at any price.
For more than fifty years

GABLER PIANOS

have afforded delight and satisfaction in thousands of American homes, and made the "Gabler tone" famous for sweetness, clearness, brilliancy and reliability. Have you read

"Around the World In a Piano Box"?

Drop us a postal and we'll send you a copy.

ERNEST GABLER & BRO.

Established 1854

459 Whitlock Ave., Borough Bronx, N. Y. City

Pabst Extract

Pabst Extract aids digestion, quiets overworked nerves and induces restful sleep. It is rich in the food extractives of malt and the tonic properties of hops, is the perfect food for up-building and fortifying the system against disease.

Pabst Extract

The "Best" Tonic

is the essence of pure, rich, nourishing malt, made by the celebrated Pabst eight-day process, which retains every particle of the rich food value of the barley grain.

Pabst Extract is highly recommended by the leading physicians for those who are run-down, overworked, dyspeptic, anæmic, nervous or who suffer from sleeplessness.

A glass taken morning, noon and night will work wonders and make possible the perfect health portrayed by the Pabst Extract Girl.

At all druggists 25c.
Insist upon the original.

Pabst Extract Department
Milwaukee, Wis.

SIMPLIFIED SHAVING

Just a Gillette Safety Razor

soap and brush---and in 2 to 5 minutes the hardest beard can be smoothly shaved from the tenderest skin, with greater comfort than you have ever experienced from your pet razor or your favorite barber.

Yet the cost is less than 2 cents a week for a perfect shave every day in the year. Think of the money and time the Gillette Razor saves its ONE MILLION satisfied users!

NO STROPPING NO HONING!
ALWAYS SHARP

Gillette double-edged wafer blades are so hard and keen that each blade gives an average of more than 20 perfect shaves. When dulled, throw away as a used pen. A new blade inserted in a second. Extra blades cost 50 cents for ten.

THE FINEST RAZOR IN THE WORLD

The Gillette Razor is built like a watch, and its sturdy frame will last a lifetime. If you could visit the Gillette Factory and see the minute care with which each individual blade is tempered, ground, honed, stropped and then tested with human hair as a barber tests his blade, you would understand why the Gillette Razor is not to be compared with any other razor ever made.

Prices: Triple silver-plated holder and 12 safety blades (24 keen edges) in a handsome leather case, $5. Standard combination set with triple silver-plated soap and brush holders, $7.50. Other sets in gold and silver. Extra blades, 10 for 50c.

Sold by Drug, Cutlery and Hardware dealers everywhere, most of whom make the 30-day free trial offer. If yours won't, write us and we will.

Write today for illustrated booklet.

Gillette Sales Company, 220 Times Bldg., New York

Exact Size of the Gillette
Safety
Razor Ready for use

Triple
Silver Plated

Gillette
Playing Cards.
For 25c.

silver or stamps and the name of a friend who does not use the Gillette Razor, we send to any address postpaid a full pack of 50-cent playing cards: round corner, gold edges, celluloid finish, in handsome gold-embossed leatherette telescope case. Send today.

Gillette Safety Razor

NO STROPPING, NO HONING.

MAKERS OF PORTRAITS and FRAMES away with your jobbers' profits, and buy direct from us.
We pay you to investigate. ARTISTS' EXCHANGE
Dept. 1, New Era Building, CHICAGO.

30 per month, expenses advanced. Men to travel, advertise, post signs, and leave samples.
Senders Co., Dept. 5, Jackson Bldg., Chicago

BARODA DIAMONDS.

Set in Solid gold mountings. You can own a diamond equal in brilliancy to any genuine stone at one-third the cost.

FLASH LIKE GENUINE

Based on test and expert examination. We guarantee them. Buy them first then pay.

CATALOGUE FREE, please Ring Master.

Included for 5 two cent stamps.

THE BARODA CO., Dept. 23, 230 North State St., Chicago, Ill.

For 50 Years

And over, Schlitz beer has been famous because of its purity. When it was brewed in a hut it was brewed by a master, aiming at new ideals. Now our output exceeds a million barrels annually. Our agencies dot the whole earth. Yet we still double the necessary cost of our brewing, to make certain that the product is pure.

Common beer, usually, costs you just as much as Schlitz.

*Ask for the Brewery Bottling.
See that the cork or crown is branded Schlitz.*

The Beer
That Made Milwaukee Famous.

A collection of various costume jewelry items, including necklaces, earrings, brooches, and pendants, displayed on a dark background. The items are numbered, likely for inventory or pricing purposes.

Diamond Merchants, Gold and Silversmiths

Old Gold Rings		PRICE LIST		Scarf Pins
around	$18.00	018 Cupid	$0.35	040 Star, silver wishbone	$0.20
set, one letter		041 Handy pin, lily	1.45	040 Star, silver, ruby eyes	1.50
the	2.00	018 Double heart25	048 Solid gold signet, one
gram, 50 cents extra		Same in gold plate35	script letter free	1.25
Stock Pins		008 Crescent, owls35	Monogram, 25 cents extra ling silver	$0.30	Same in gold plate35	070 Solid gold, pearls	1.00
plate, pearl25	035 Handy pin, holly35	082 Solid gold, wishbone50
gold, bead edge75	019 Chatelaine, Iris50	Neck Chains
plate, bead edge25	Hat pin like 00950	054 Solid 14K gold, 15 in.	$4.00
gold, scroll50	067 Heart35	056 Head 14K gold 14 in.	12.00
gold, holly75	080 Dutch girl80	058 Gold filled, 15 in.	1.50
plate, plain35	Gold Plated Brooches		082 Gold filled brooch, 15 in.	2.50
gold, plain50	Hat Pins		087 I.O.O.F pin, solid gold	$0.75
gold, bead edge50	Sterling silver like 049 $0.50		058 Solid gold locket	4.50
Silver Brooches		Gold plated signet, 1		064 Sterling silver coffee le leaf	$0.25	script letter free		spoon, holly and ma-
set in gold plate35	Monogram, 25 cents extra		stetoe80
Solid Gold Brooches		008 Crescent, pearls	$1.50
		049 Pearl wings	6.50
		080 Pearl crescent	2.75

I will be interested in our Catalog X because you have holiday gifts to buy. The book pictures Gold and Silver Jewelry, Leather and Toilet Goods, Watches, Rings, Table Ware, etc., and is much lower than the ordinary retailer can possibly furnish them; it tells you how you can save one-third of your purchase money by buying "Direct from Workshop."

Will Appreciate buying from a firm that has a national reputation for honest dealing; a firm guarantees the safe delivery of each package; that guarantees to please you or to PROMPTLY your money. Moreover, a firm that is accommodating and courteous at all times.

Above Picture of articles selected from our Catalog, gives you a little idea of the book. It contains illustrations of over 10,000 articles photographed direct from the goods, 10,000 holiday suggestions. Beautiful catalog, intensely interesting, full of ideas. Send for the book. It's free. Do it NOW.

IRD-NORTH CO., 316 Essex Street, Salem, Mass.

It's Easy to be Good

when perfectly well.

If COFFEE keeps you out of balance and half sick suppose you quit the Royal Order of Coffee Cranks and join the Lodge.

POSTUM

"There's a Reason"

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., U. S. A.

GENTLEMEN
WHO DRESS FOR STYLE
HEATNESS, AND COMFORT
WEAR THE IMPROVED

BOSTON GARTER

THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD
The Name is stamped on every loop—

The Velvet Grip
CUSHION BUTTON
CLASP

LIES FLAT TO THE LEG—NEVER SLIPS, TEARS NOR UNFASTENS

Sample pair, $11.50., Cotton $5.
Based on receipt of price.

GEO. FROST CO., Makers
Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

ALWAYS EASY

IT'S WISE TO USE RUBISOAM NOW

You will carry beauty, fragrance and brightness with you if you use RUBISOAM the bright, beautiful, fragrant dentifrice. Popular because worthy. Always in season. The smile-brightener. The teeth whitener.

THE CHOICE OF THE WISE

RUBISOAM

FOR THE TEETH

25 CENTS AT ALL DRUGGISTS

For free sample, Address E. W. HOYT & Co.
LOWELL, MASS.

